THE LIGHTNINGLIKE LOON.

THE LIGHTNINGLIKE LOON.

The loon is the quickest living creature. A loon that has had experience can dodge the flash of a gun. You see a loon on a lake, but long before you see him he sees you and has taken a mental inventory of you and your belongings. If you have no gun, you may perhaps approach within 100 yards before he laughs at you with that horrid shrick which gives him his name and disappears under the water, but show a gun and he does not stop to laughbe goes instanter. When in a sportive mood, he sometimes waits until he sees you about ready to fire, when, at the flash, he dives, and you see the rhot spatter the water where he has just gone down.

REJECTED FORTUNES.

(Pearson's.)

Professor Bell had a strenuous time over his invention of the telephone. He took the first working model of his instrument to John A. Logan and offered him a half interest for $2,500, saying that it would do a way with the telegraph and that there would be millions in it. Logan replied: "I dare say your machine works perfectly, but who would want to talk through such a thing as that, anyway? I advise you to save your money, young vise you to save your money, young man." Bell then offered a tenth interest to an examiner in the patent office for $100 in cash. It was refused, That tenth interest was worth $1,500,000 in fifteen years.

Does Not Believe Hell to be Place of Literal Fire.

Thinks Souls of Departed May Be Benefited by Prayers of Those Still on Earth.

(Montreal Star, Monday.) In the course of a sermon on "The Intermediate State," in Christ Church Cathedral yesterday the Rev. Mr. Stee expressed his conviction that the soul of the departed might be benefited by expressed his conviction that the souls of the departed might be benefited by the prayers of those on earth.

He also expressed the belief that the condition of those who have reached the intermediate state may be changed by contrition and repentance, and that their final state may be greatly different from their present condition in the land of departed spirits.

The reverend gentleman took as his text a portion of the well-known parable of Dives and Lararus—"And in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off and Lazarus in his bosom."

The speaker said that the place spoken of in his text was Sheol, of the place of the departed spirits. By this was meant the intermediate state—that spot wherein the souls of the dead were being kept until the final consummation of all things.

Sheol, as shown in the text, was divided into two parts, and a great gulf separated the two.

Lazarus entered one of these divisions, while Dives entered the other. But the latter could see the former. The state of Lazarus was one of Dilss, while that of Dives was one of torment.

Here the speaker referred to the old idea that hell was a place of suffering and of torment, but to his mind the suffering was to a great extent mental and not physical.

Sheol, however, was not the final abode of the dammed, and a soul suffering torments therein might possibly reach the final abode of the righteous. For instance, Dives' condition in Sheol might be changed for one of bliss when he entered the final stage of the soul's existence.

GOD IS A GOD OF COMPASSION.

GOD IS A GOD OF COMPASSION.

GOD IS A GOD OF COMPASSION.

God was a God of love and compassion, and it was the speaker's conviction that He would listen to the prayers of those in Sheol who repented of the sins committed on earth, and save such souls eventually.

For what other reason, he argued, did Christ preach to the spirits in prison?

His conception of God made it impossible for him to believe that the condition of the dead could not be changed after death.

The state of man's existence in the intermediate state depended, however, solely on the life he lived on earth. If thad been well spent then he would go where Lazarus went. If, on the contrary, it had been spent in sin and sensuality then his lot in Sheol would be similar to that of Dives.

But these conditions might be changed at the final consummation of all things.

SYDNEY, Cape Breton, July 22.— The Peary relief steamer Windward sailed at eight o'clock this evening on her voyage to the northern seas At one time in the afternoon it was feared that the expedition would be delayed, no one knew for just how long.

for about two c'clock water was noticed to be risinig rapidly in the hold.

Pumps were immediately set to work, but it was after 3 c'clock before they began to make any effective progress.

By 6 c'clock the vessel was pumped out dry. The leakage was due to the steamer being sunk deep in the water through the weight of coal taken on board, water coming in on the upper sides which previously had been perfectly dry.

The Windward goes direct to Etah, and if Peary is not there she will therefore one on the perfectly dry.

The Sun's correspondent had a shortine of the steamer with Mrs. Peary this afternoon. She said she hoped they would get back in safety with Mr. Peary with them. She felt grateful for what had been done for her and her husband, and hoped Mr. Peary's adventures worth would be such as would amply repay them.
