Clippers Win from St. Johns in 9th and Have Another Chance

Mysterious Smith Who Came from Boston Won Out in Ninth After Greatest Pitchers' Battle Ever Seen Here--Peasley at His Best, Only Allowing Two Hits, but Weakened at the Last and Opponent Won His Own Game--2,500 See Game.

Clippers, 2; St. Johns, 1.

Christy Matthewson's great baseball classic "Win in the Ninth" certainly never idealized a more sensational finish than was witnessed by about 3,000 fans and fannies on the Every Day Club grounds Saturday.

It was great baseball, the greatest seen here this year, and the monster crowd showed its appreciation of this fact in no uncertain terms. While the score one to one and both pitchers sending up mystifying folk, it looked like the little brook the game would end on and on until Woodstock's southern pitcher, who had a last season. Four balls, a batter hit by a swiftly breaking inshoot and the mysterious Mr. Smith's smashing drive among the crowd near right field fence, was the last of the drama to the aspirations of Tilly's crew and the game was won--won in the ninth.

It was the greatest pitcher's battle seen here in years, and although the Clipper man shaded, his younger and less experienced opponent the young Woodstock twirler nevertheless pitched masterly ball.

That Man Smith.

"Smith" held the Saints at his mercy throughout, and the St. Johns lone run was made on some loose playing by the infield.

He had an abundance of speed, coupled with a repertoire of curves that quite mystified the locals, while he held the runners on bases in a style that has rarely been seen here.

Not since the days of Coakley and the now great "Cy" Coombs was such masterly work exhibited to local fans, and many critics declare that Smith's all round good work on Saturday shaded anything ever pulled off here by Connie Mack's premier boxman.

Manager McBrine also introduced to the fans the backstop in the person of McCarthy, his younger and Cincinnati Reds. "Mac" made an instant hit with the fans and did not allow a single stolen base, while his clever coaching sallies made him a great favorite with the fair fannies.

Change All Round.

It was an entirely rejuvenated team that Tilly presented to the fans and only three of the old guard took part in the game. Four Woodstock players figured in the infield, while Gallagher of Moncton held down short and Cribbs, was succeeded in right field by Trites.

The fielders had very little work to do and yet some glaring sins were committed. There was considerable discussion from the ratings of both umpires, many declaring that Neptune was safe on a mighty close decision at first, while "Pete" McAllister's decisions on strikes and balls were questioned by the fans in no mild manner.

It was the largest crowd to witness a game in this city for many years. Long before the hour of three the big grandstand was packed and standing room alone was available, while a surging mass of humanity crowded on the field, all anxious and eager to witness the promised spectacular duel.

Old Sol supplied the weather and he beamed most kindly and beneficially on the proceedings, which caused an aeroplane feeling of exhilaration.

The fair enthusiasts were out in force to cheer their favorites and the grandstand might have been the balcony of a fashionable theatre judging from the pretty rainments and display of millinery.

Never were more beautiful and artistic decorations witnessed in that ancient-looking stand. The blooms were some of St. John's fairest daughters who were scattered here and there in no great profusion, which caused their fragrance and bright coloring to be all the more conspicuous. Blondes with delicate and plink complexions browns in all tones, Titians with flawless coloring, brunettes with creamy tints and dark eyes were arranged here and there in the most harmonious and selected settings.

Delicious delicacies in the shape of chewing gum, pop corn, boxes of Crackerjacks, cigars and cigarettes were from time to time indulged in. It was a meek tribute to the fact that baseball, as entertainment, far exceeds that of any other, as the most diverse and promiscuous multitude brought together, are most congenial and happy when crowded along a rough hewn plank on an elevated stand.

At Critical Stages.

And as the vast throng sat there and cheered and applauded their favorites, little perhaps did they realize the strain upon the players. A little over-anxiousness, a slip, and a consequent fall error might mean the losing of the championship, and subject to the unfortunate player to the derision and ridicule of 2,000 fickle fans--and their anger--the anger of baseball is something that all players dread.

But Saturday's baseball should have been satisfying to the most exacting fan; true, there were slips, but they were more than eclipsed by flashes of brilliancy which made the spectators gasp in open-mouthed astonishment. The finish alone was thrilling. When the Clippers went to bat in their half of the ninth, there was a strange stillness among the spectators; the Saints braced and steadied themselves for the onslaught. Howe was the first man up, and Howe was not hitting all through the latter part of the series. The young pitcher sized up the batter and sent up a wide one--a ball. Again he sends the ball cutting through the air--two balls. The crowd are now growing excited; they surge further on the field; on the Clipper bench there is great excitement; the St. John supporters groan, as above the din and uproar the umpire is heard to call "three balls." The excitement grows; something is going to happen. Many times before has Peasley pitched balls to a batter, but now it seems as if the psychological moment has arrived. Coaches are sent down the lines, and the next man up nervously prepares to face the pitcher. Another ball, and the pitcher gets his base.

Won--His Own Game.

A speedy inshoot that breaks swiftly before the plate, hits the next batter, and he too, gets his base. And then comes the opposing pitcher himself, and hundreds of throats yelled him to win his own game. Above that awful noise, like the beating of waves on a distant shore, the umpire is heard to call two more balls, and the faithful supporters of the St. Johns hold their breath.

A hit would mean not only the losing and winning of that game, but another chance at the championship as well. The young pitcher steadies himself for the crucial test against his veteran opponent; up goes that mighty arm, and like a bullet the sphere comes sailing through the air. Crack! the bat has met the leather with mighty force, and like a speck against the distant sky the sphere sails through the air and falls among the surging mass of people in the outfield. The crowd rises like a mighty wave, cheering madly as the players scurrier about the bases, and the game is won and lost.

The Game.

It was exactly 3 o'clock when play ball was called, the St. Johns going to bat. Neptune rolled one to Finnamore at second, who fumbled badly. Wilson sent a high fly to A. Finnamore. Tott bunted in front of the plate, and was thrown out by McCarthy. Ramsey grounded to Long, retiring the side.

Howe started proceedings for the Clippers by grounding to the pitcher. Long walked. Smith struck out, but McCarthy got a pass, and then Chase killed chances by striking out.

In the 2nd Gallagher sent a fly to Chase. Trites sent a grounder to first which McGovern let go through him, but Woods and Riley fanned.

In the 3rd Peasley and Neptune struck out. Wilson walked, and liff grounded out to Long.

For the Clippers A. Finnamore liffed one to liff and McGovern did likewise to McGovern. Donnelly got a base on balls, stole second, and went third on Wilson's wide throw; but G. Finnamore prevented a score by grounding out to Neptune.

In the 4th, Ramsey and Trites struck out and Gallagher fled to Smith.

Scored This Time.

In the fifth the saints made their lone tally. Wilson was hit by a swift one and got a base, Riley grounded to Finnamore advancing Riley to second and the liff outfielder took the third station on a wild pitch by Smith.

first hit of the game. Chase fouled to the catcher, A. Finnamore fanned and McGovern sent a roller to Ramsey.

Safe Hit.

In the sixth Wilson hit safely to left and advanced on liff's out, Ramsey struck out, but McCarthy dropped the ball and on an error of judgment by the battery, Ramsey got first.

Wilson reached third on a passed ball and things looked rocky for the Clippers. Then Smith tightened the howsers and the next two men sent out love taps in front of the pitcher.

The Clippers tied the score in their half, Donnelly hit a hot one at Gallagher which the Doc failed to handle. G. Finnamore walked, Howe liffed out to Trites and Donnelly went to third on the throw in. Finnamore stole second and drew a throw from Peasley to catch him off second which Riley let get through him and Donnelly scored. Long liffed out to Woods and Smith grounded to Ramsey.

In the seventh Woods tapped to the pitcher, Riley elevated one to Donnelly and Peasley struck out. For the Clippers A. Finnamore grounded to Ramsey, McCarthy struck out and Chase tapped one to Peasley.

For the St. Johns in the eighth, Neptune grounded to G. Finnamore. Wilson liffed out to A. Finnamore and liff struck out.

For the Clippers McGovern was safe on Gallagher's second fumble, but was caught napping off the base by Peasley. Donnelly fled to liff and G. Finnamore rolled one to Ramsey.

In the ninth Ramsey and Gallagher grounded to Smith and Long. Trites singled to left and Woods walked. Riley retired the side by flying to A. Finnamore. For the Clippers Howe walked, Long was hit by a pitched ball, and Smith doubled to right field scoring Howe with the winning run.
