M'GRAW REVIEWS OUTLOOK

John J. McGraw, the manager of the New York Giants, in reviewing the outlook in the major league, says the following in the Boston Globe:

More and lot baseball has been played in the National League this season than I have ever seen since breaking into the Big Show. If there had been a real ball club on the circuit, or if one club had played real ball, it would be so far ahead by this time that the race would be practically over. It is criminal, criminal that all, that is, the Giants haven't the pennant clinched now. A lot of college teams could have been leading the league this year if they had been in it.

The players are drawing more money and playing less baseball than ever before in the history of the game. It is playing unless he lost of leg. I recall once, when with the Baltimore Orioles, that one of our men had something the matter with one of his lamps. He was inclined to be lazy, too. He was around complaining to "Joe" Kelly and me one day. "My eye is bad, I don't think I'll be able to work today," he said.

"If you lose that eye you've still got another one," answered Kelly. "Don't quit for a little thing like that."

The player didn't. He went out and played good ball, even though he had a weak lamp. But now, if a big league had a bad team he must be laid off to see a chiropractor about it. There have been more men drawing bank president's salaries this season for sitting on a bench and keeping one finger in bandages than there are active players in the game, almost like a German field hospital as near as I can come to recognizing a German field hospital from newspaper descriptions.

The money more a man gets the easier it is to hurt him. They are like expensive big-brac. Much of this stuff is nonsense and I am going to stop it on my club, even if it leaves me in last place.

One of my catchers met some old friends on the road. We were short of catchers any way with Myers wearing a bad finger and nothing left but this fellow and recruits. He thought I would not risk suspending him because he knew we were shy on catchers. I fooled him. I suspended him indefinitely and fined him besides. Now he is talking of jumping to the Federals.

LOSES ONLY ONE GAME IN 25.

Peoria, Ill., June 16—H. F. Oetzmann of Davenport, Ia., was declared winner of the first prize at the 18th annual congress of the North American Skat League, which closed here today. He received a prize of $1,000 in cash. Oetzmann won 25 games, losing one, and scoring 787 total points. The 1916 convention was awarded to St. Paul.

Belmont Pays $15,000 for a Colt.

New York, June 16—August Belmont is now the owner of Sam McMeekin, the 3-year-old bay colt by McGee-Gunrod, which raced and won two races at the Belmont Park track in the name and colors of John E. Madden. Mr. Belmont paid $15,000 for the colt.

Jockey Dreyer's Leg Broken.

New York, June 16—Jockey Dreyer sustained a broken leg at the Jamaica track today. While riding James Butler's two-year-old chestnut filly Variety in the Greenfield selling stakes, he was caught in a jam between Regis and Fernrock and knocked from his horse. He has the best bones on our circuit this year, and I am not sure he is the best in either big league. I mean Grover Alexander. American Leaguers who made the trip with Alexander last winter on the all-star tour claim that he is better than Johnson.

Stallings is still asking every one to wait. "Wait until my pitchers are right and Johnny Evers gets back in the game," says George. "Then we will come." Stallings has said that Evers won't be able to play again for another month, which will hurt the Braves very much. What a great year for a dark horse to step in and grab that flag! The race was just made for a dark horse, because none of the entries is running true to form. The Phillies might be that dark horse.

SOME GOSSIPY BALL ITEMS

Jack Hendricks, now manager of the Indianapolis ball team, was at one time a ball player under command of Manager Pongo Cantillon and Pongo named him. Now Hendricks is a co-manager with Pongo and Freeman Alford, in the Kansas City Post, tells this story of how it happened:

Jack was surprised in the middle of the season to learn that he had been purchased from Spokane by Washington. Having nothing to say he reported to his new owners. Jack was told to cover a bunch of splinters on the dug-out seat. He sat there for eleven days.

On the twelfth day the game grew close. In the ninth inning the Washington catcher got a single and lumbered to first. The Senators needed a run and needed it bad.

Cantillon, who was coaching off first, called to Hendricks. The youth divested himself of his sweater and trotted over to first.

"Run for this guy," instructed Cantillon, "go down when I tell you." In wonderment Hendricks took the base. On the second pitch Joe yelled with all his lung power, "Beat it!" Hendricks got up his best steam, but was intercepted twenty-five feet from second by the baseman with the ball in his hands.

He strode back toward the bench, trying his best to avoid the awful eye of the late Cantillon.

"You poor sucker," breathed Joe with the deadliest venom. "I thought you could run bases."

"Who told you I could run bases?" demanded Hendricks with spirit.

"Why, you stole sixty-five bases in Spokane last year, you bum, you!" Cantillon told Hendricks, ending with, "didn't you?"

"I stole only fifteen bases in Spokane last year," answered Hendricks truthfully. "The record book says sixty-five, but that was a typographical error by the printer."

Joe tore his hair and cursed. He screeched and fumed around the baseline until his players grew so nervous they blew up and lost the game.

"Get out of here," Joe stormed at Hendricks. "I don't want you around. Get out, you—you—typographical error, you!"

Fred Clarke appeared as a base ball theorist in Philadelphia the other day. He told a reporter all about it, and in his remarks he delivered a very effective little sermon that shows a big league manager looks on the rowdy from very much the same angle as any employer. Here is what Clarke said:

"I want to emphasize a very important point. The better a man is as a man, the better he is as a player. Cultivate ambition, morality, manly honor, kindness, generosity, domesticity, Christianity and gentleness in a man and you make him a better ball player. I have no room for the rowdy on my club. I never had, even in the days before the game had reached the high plane it now occupies. Any time I get a tough nut, a bad actor, on my team I try a certain length of time to make him see the light. If he refuses to walk straight after a fair trial, then he goes, no matter how good, a ball player he is."

Then the reporter asked Clarke the qualifications for a big league manager and Clarke said:

"Don't you think that's rather tough?" I feel like giving you the same answer as I did the Pittsburgh boys at the conclusion of last season when they asked me to say something about the world's series. I called their attention to the peculiarity of expecting the manager of a team that finished in seventh place to say anything about a world series."

And the manager of the present third place club laughed.

Clarke is known as a hard driver on the bench, but, according to his own

CHINESE BILLIARD EXPERT WHO DISPLAYS RARE FORM

HENRY LEONG

In Henry Leong, nineteen years old, Buffalo has what it calls a Chinese billiard expert. The designation, however, is not literally accurate. Although the young cousin is of Chinese parentage, he is not a Celestial, for he was born in San Francisco and was reared in New York, where he learned the rudiments of billiards. Removing to Buffalo, he continued to practise and improve at the game. Five months ago Leong became interested in three cushion caroms. Observing his attitude, W. R. Cullen, who represents Buffalo in the Interstate Three-Cushion League during the last two years, gave him instructions. Under tuition the boy made remarkable progress. His mentor says: "Henry's advancement has been surprising. He has a splendid stroke and gives promise of becoming a great expert."

declaration, he isn't the variety of a player who feels that he must be able to whip any man on his team to enforce discipline.

"I handled ball clubs in the days when a club that didn't have three or four tough nut fighters on it it never heard of, but I never had to hit a man. Yes, I've been sorely tempted."

About 9,000 Milwaukeeans, mostly Germans, went out to see the Pirates in an exhibition game two years ago. One wanted the Brewers to win, but more than that he wanted the great Wagner to hit. Once when Milwaukee's errors allowed the Pirates to fill the bases with Wagner up the German rooster fretted over the possibilities and then a bright and happy look came over his face and he yelled:

"Ach, Hans! Make for us a long out."

Mike Mitchell is eventful and temperamental. "Only once in my life did I ever get fighting mad at a fan," said Mike. "That was at Cincinnati. We were playing New York and Mathewson was pitching."

Matty's fast one and his fader looked easy to me. Three times I hit it solidly and drove it straight at some fielder.

"In the tenth I came up with one out and two on. I never hit a ball much harder. It went like a bullet and straight at Herzog. He grabbed it, staggered and hung on. The ball almost tore his hands off. As I turned some bug yelled, 'That's right. Make pop em up—keep poppin' em up.'"

George Mullin was the hardest player to handle he ever met, according to Hughie Jennings.

BROOKLYN BUYS PITCHER DOUGLAS.

Cincinnati, June 16—Pitcher Phil Douglas, was sold today to Brooklyn by Manager Herzog for a cash consideration, amount not announced. It is known that Herzog tried to make a trade for Douglas last week. Douglas will join Brooklyn tomorrow. Herzog has been sounding every manager in the two major leagues in an effort to get the best out of Douglas, who broke training three times this season.

SUGGESTION TO SHORTEN TIME OF GAMES

In an endeavor to speed up baseball games in the big leagues, President David L. Fultz, of the Players' fraternity, today addressed a letter to the directors of the fraternity, asking the co-operation of all members to this end. The letter says in part:

"There has been a good deal of complaint this season regarding the length of time it is taking to play big league games, many of them consuming approximately two hours and some a great deal more. A number of players have expressed their desire to co-operate with the rest in an endeavor to lessen the playing time as much as possible."

The consensus of opinion seems to be that by observing the following points the players could materially shorten the time consumed First by hurrying to and from positions; second, by avoiding unnecessary arguments with umpires, and third, by pitchers consuming as little time as possible in preparing for the delivery.

"It has also been suggested that the trouble could be helped by a uniform rule requiring the umpire to throw in another ball when a foul goes any distance from the field of play, but this of course, is not within our jurisdiction."

"This is a bad year financially for baseball; the fans are not as enthusiastic as they have been in years gone by; it is unquestionably up to the players to make the game as attractive to the public as possible, and we all know a long drawn out game especially when the result is determined in the early innings, does much of its attractiveness."

"The American League adopted a rule more than a year ago requiring the umpire to throw another ball into play when a foul goes any reasonable distance from the playing field," said Chairman Herrmann.

"This custom is likewise being observed in some National League games at Cincinnati, for instance. Here another ball is tossed into play even when a foul hits the screen in back of the catcher."
