HEAVEY STEWART, tance to any one, and to inquiries pressed on her lately made contradictory replies. Finally considerable excitement was aroused, and rumors gained credence that the man had been killed and burned by his wife. The woman's last story was that her husband had gone to California, and she heard had been murdered. Today, after refusing the officers admittance, she locked and left her house. Believing she intended flight, she was arrested and searched without result. A search warrant was then taken out, and the officers went to the house to solve the mystery. Breaking in a window in presence of a great crowd three down in presence of a great crowd three officers entered, but were hardly within before the missing Smith, clad only in shirt and pants, appeared armed with an axe and knife, and dealt Policeman Dyke a severe blow between the eyes. Nothing daunted by the unexpected onslaught, he collared the man, and he was taken to jail. He presented a wild and haggard appearance, and his wife sought to care for him and conceal his condition. The affair created mitch excitement. Since his being placed in jail the man and woman are both raving like maniacs.
