

nicely, the fracture having been well set, and it is now a mere matter of time. Meanwhile he is not forgotten, some one or another of the faculty and men visiting him every day.

The students' share in the Convocation went off well on the whole, but it is most lamentable that the speech of a certain gentleman who has done so much for Trinity in the past, was so often thoughtlessly interrupted. "Oom Paul" was a great success, and has been thought worthy of imitation in some quarters.

Rev. A. U. de Pencier was at the Convocation dinner, and also called on some of the men.

Rev. F. G. Kirkpatrick was also a visitor in College in connection with Convocation. He now writes B.C.L. after his name.

Messrs. F. J. S. Martin and C. W. Bell, '96, are living in College, while attending lectures at Osgoode Hall.

I. A. R. Macdonald hurt his back rather badly in our first match with Varsity II. on October 14th, but is about again as hale and hearty as ever.

A very welcome visitor has been about the corridors the last few days in the person of Mr. H. C. N. Wilson, B.A., ("John Dougan").

We are sorry to learn that the rule prohibiting dogs was broken on Sunday evening last by a prominent member of the Third Year, though we hear it was chiefly the dog's fault.

Trinity Medical College.

IT is our desire to call the attention of the students of all years in this college, to the fact that THE REVIEW is published not only in the interest of Trinity College, but in the interest of Trinity Medical College. From this time on your editor will have a position on the chief Editorial Staff, and will have quite as much say in the deliberations of that board as any other member. We would respectfully solicit your hearty support in making it a grand success. Three columns are at our disposal; let us fill them every month with literary productions and spicy news.

The elections for the various societies have been exciting the usual amount of interest in the College during the past few weeks. The contest in the case of the Literary and Medical Society Committees was not so keen as it might have been; however, the men elected on those committees will be sure to make things hum. In the elections for the dinner committee and representatives, which were held on the 3rd inst., the number of candidates was large and as a result the contest was most exciting. We were on that day treated to such outbursts of eloquence as I know not how to describe. Of this one thing we feel certain it will be many a long day ere the aroma of those speeches shall have passed away. And in years to come, men who sat and listened then will present themselves as candidates for like offices and show by their eloquence who were their models. Ah! what a responsible position one is placed in, when he rises to sway the multitudes by his eloquence, and endeavors to turn the tide of an election in his favour! But there are times when eloquence will not avail; when the fates have willed otherwise and he, who has sat down amidst a deafening applause, finds, when the ballots are counted, that he has been found wanting, and the other fellow is elected. Such is life and such is the case here. Speaking for those who ran the race set before them with patience, and—what counts for more, at least is more gratifying—success, we are bound to say that no fears are entertained, but that we shall be honourably represented by them wherever they may go. And of not one shall we ever be able to say in his case that our confidence was misplaced. In regard to our Dinner Committee, they are all active men and already have begun operations. Left in their hands, the dinner of this year will be second to none in the history of Trinity Medical College.

On Tuesday night, the 7th inst., the first meeting of the Medical Society was held. Dr. Fotheringham presented a very practical and instructive paper in his usual lucid style. The other essayist of the evening was Mr. Frank Trebilcock, who read a paper on the Treatment of Phthisis in the Gravenhurst Sanatorium. As he spent the past summer in that institution the notes of his experience are very valuable.

After the Medical Society meeting the members of the Dinner Committee and Representatives gave an oyster supper to those present, in the final room. It goes without saying, it was a grand success; nothing fails down here. Seldom or never has there been such an attendance at the Medical Society meeting. Excellent though the papers were, we cannot attribute it to them alone—the supper must have had something to do with it. To ensure a full house at every meeting we can think of nothing that would be more effective than this. We respectfully submit it to the Society's committee for consideration, and look to see some action in the matter before very long.

We are always pleased to hear of the success of our graduates. Of the many distinguished men who, of recent years, have passed through this College, Dr. Ed. Shoemaker is by no means the least. After graduating as gold medalist in 1898 he went down to New York and succeeded in obtaining First Class honours in the New York State Medical Examinations. Then he settled at Newfane, N. Y. and from the very first has enjoyed a large practice and is immensely popular. Acting on the old saying "It is not good for man to be alone," he married Miss McGilivray of Ontario County, on the 21st of June last. For them our hearty wish is a long and happy life with continued success.

Another graduate whose name we must mention is Dr. B. J. Hazelwood. After carrying off the gold medal last spring he went south to Kansas and is at present located at Pittsburg. This is a mining town of 15,000, and he is surgeon for a large mining syndicate there; and has worked up besides a large practice for himself. Continued success!

The Hallowe'en celebration of this year was one of the most successful we have ever had and reflects great credit upon our worthy committee, who were untiring in their efforts to make it pass off nicely. Trinity Meds again attended the "Grand" in a body, where they and Pharmacy occupied the whole of the balcony. While there they conducted themselves in such a manner as to do honour to the great College which they represented. The inter-act programme presented by our boys was very high class. It was listened to not only by the students but by the rest of the audience with marked appreciation and delight. Trinity showed up well before the citizens and have nothing with which to reproach themselves. The parade after the play, owing to the disagreeable weather, was not as extensive as on other occasions, but was conducted in a gentlemanly manner, so that neither police nor private citizens had anything to find fault with. As a general rule it will be found that the depredations laid to the charge of students, are the doings of a mob of hoodlums in no way connected with any college. The following criticism of the play presented on that occasion is the work of a well known fourth-year man and will be read with interest and appreciation.
