HAS THE GLOBE BOLTED?

After an excellently written con plimentary article on Sir Wilfrid Laurier's great speech in bringing in the Autonomy Bill, the Toronto Globe winds up in this strain:

"The question at issue is this: Is it right or wise for the Dominion Parliament to attempt to make the maintenance of Separate schools a permanent constitutional opligation on the new western Provinces? The Globe's answer to that question is not the answer given in the measure now before Parliament. We are convinced that the spirit and intention of the British North America Act concede to the Provincial Legislatures full control of their educational system, subject to the right of the Dominion Parliament, in a specified case, to enact remedial legislation. The exception made with regard to Separate Schools in Ontario and Quebec does not impair that fundamental constitutional principle of Provincial autonomy in education, and the history of educational controversies in New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Manitoba confirms this view. And we are further convinced that the Dominion legislation of 1875 securing the establishment of Separate schools in the Territories does not make it obligatory on Parliament, now that a Provincial constitution is being granted, to enact that the establishment of Separate Schools shall be a permanent obligation on the new Provincial Legislatures. So long as those communities remained under Territorial government the Dominion Parliament had the right to dictate their educational policy, but when a Provincial constitution is granted it must conform to the provisions of the British North America Act, regardless of any preliminary enactments during Territorial sta-

The Globe's attitude as thus outlined will meet general favor, we believe, in Ontario and the Northwest, but doubtless the majority in Quebec will be displeased to see the Ontario Liberal organ in opposition to the Premier on this question. The people most concerned, however, are those in the new provinces, and they do not desire Separate Schools. With a feeling antagonistic to Separate Schools, it is not wise, in this free country, to attempt coercion.

Wilfrid contends that the constitution of the Dominion, i. e., the British North America Act, provides that Separate Schools shall exist in the new provinces, placing them on the same basis as the old provinces in the days when the Confederation was formed. The other side of the story is that the B. N. A. Act gives to provinces the control of their educational affairs. The latter is the view here in Ontario.

Sir Wilfrid apparently regards the R. N. A. Act as a flexible one in gard to crown lands. One that phase of it he spoke as follows:

"This plea (the constitutional one). was no doubt suggested by the fact that at the time of Confederation all the parties to the original contract, that is to say, the Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Ontario and Quebec, each retained its own lands, and when at a later day the Province of British Columbia was admitted to the Dominion that province retained her lands. But the cases are not at all parallel. When the Provinces which I have mentioned came into the Confederation they were already sovereignties, I use that term, because while having their dependencies as colonies, they were sovereignties in the sense of having the management of their own lands. Each had a department of Government called the Crown Lands Department, which was entrusted with the power of dealing with those lands either for revenue or for settlement. But the case of these new Provinces is not at all that forbids the endowment of any parallel. They never had the own-ership of the lands. These lands were bought by the Dominion Govent and have been administered by the Dominion Government. Therefore, I say the two cases are not in any way parallel, but are absolitely different,"

The Toronto News asks:

"Where is the parallel in the case of education? Are not the Territorjes as different from the old Provinces of Ontario and Quebec in that respect as in respect to public lands? Are not the circumstances as different as it is possible to imagine? If the new Provinces are to be dealt with exactly as Ontario and Quebec were dealt with in 1867, all that is necessary to-day is to repeat the provisions of the B. N. A. Act in "The Act creating the new Provinces not only establishes Separate Schools, but provides for their endowment out of the moneys voted by the Province for education. 'In the appropriation of public moneys by the Legislature in aid of education, and in the distribution of any moneys paid to the Government of the Province, arising from the school fund established by the Dominion Lands Act, there shall be no discrimination between the Public Schools and the Separate Schools, and such moneys shall be applied to the support of Public and Separate Schools, in equitable shares or proportions.' It has evidently been determined to make the dose as strong as possible."

The Toronto Telegram, under the heading "The Laurier Bill is a Sin Against Canada," goes on to say: "Canada has fallen upon evil days when the Premier of a free Government proclaims the banns of unholy marriage between Church and State, and the leaders of a free Ocposition utters no brave word of protest against the coarse excedients dictating a union that must prove curse to both Church and State.

"The speech of Sir Wilfrid Laurier was not without its rretty frivolities of manner. Its abundant lack of thought and rower was decked out in all the ribbons and gewgaws that pertain to the milliner's shop rather than to the arena of rublic debate.

"The speech was mostly stuff and rubbish, trimmed by the deft hand of an expert in the art of verbal millinery. It was painfully naked and unadorned with the strength and sincerity of a master in the science of statesmanship,
"'The shallows marmur,' and an evil bill is floated on the shallow murmurings of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's rhetoric.

The great Liberal principle that forbids the unholy union of Church and State; the great Liberal Trinciple church with rublic lands or public money for the teaching of its own peculiar tenets; the great Liberal principle that forbids a federal Parliament to interfere in the purely domestic questions of education-all these rinciples were outraged and jut to open sname in the speech and bill of Sir Wilfrid Laurier,"

From the above expressions in different newscapers it appears as though there are breakers ahead for

FELIX DOYLE'S STORY.

Me Comes Out Plainly at Coroner's In quest That Mother Was Murdered. quest That Mether Was Muraer and E-antford, Feb. 28.—It was an altogether different story Felix Doyle told before the coroner's jury last night at Burford concerning the murder chis mother to that he told the neighbor his mother to that he told the neighbors and newspapermen last week. He now discards the accident theory and comes out plainly with the story that his mether was murdered. He formerly said he found the body in the woodshed, now he admits he found her in the bed in the bedroom. He tells a peculiar yern about cleaning and sweeping the house after he knew his mother was dead and before he called the neighbors, and said that he didn't want the neighbors to think them untidy.

Club Killed Her.

A new phase developed yesterday when a heavy club was found. The club is about a yard long and has a strip of iron on one side. One end is covered with blood. The club is so heavy that a light blow with it on the head would cause death. Felix had this club hidden in the straw in the pig pen, but persists in saying he brought it there from the gate down the lane, where he found it. He says the club was never from the gate down the lane, where he found it. He says the club was never in the house. He admits it is a piece of his wagon, and once said it might have been in the yard. He told the fury how he and his mother always got on well together. County Crown Attorney Wilkes has the case in hand, while A. Baird of this city appeared on hebalf or Felix.

behalf of Felix.

Metive for Crime. Metive for Crime.

The authorities think they have discovered a motive for the crime, if it were perpetrated by Felix. The son had three notes against him, amounting altogether to something over $200. It is alleged he forged his mother's mark to these notes. The handwriting of Felix and his mother is exactly the same. There is a witness to the signatures, but he said he had put his name there after the other two, and not in the old lady's presence. Felix is not as yet under arrest, though he is held at the home of County Constable Shaver near Burford.

With reference to the Northwest Territories case, one to the Northwest Territories case, one point involved an answer to the question, "What sort of taxation was the Railway Company exempt from?" The exemption clause provides that the railway 'shall be forever free from taxation by the Dominion or by any Province hereafter to be established, or by any municipal corporation therein." The taxes sued for were school taxes levied by a school district under the provision of a Northwest Territories ordinance, and the question was whether such taxation was within the words "taxation by the Dominion."
