QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Veterinary.

COUGH AND ENLARGED GLANDS.

Yearling and two-year-old colts had distemper. They are getting better, but the glands in their throats are enlarged, and they cough.

Ans.—Rub the enlarged glands well once daily with compound iodine ointment. For the cough, take 6 ounces chlorate of potassium and 1 ounce quinine. Mix, and make into 48 powders. Give each colt a powder every night and morning.

FALL FROM TILE OUTLET.

I have a field through which I wish to run a tile drain, 65 rods long. In the first 50 rods, there is a fall of about 6 feet, the remaining 15 is almost dead level. The open drain into which it runs is on a level with the mouth of the tile drain, and has very little fall for 12 rods, it then falls rapidly. I cannot deepen this drain without a lot of labor and expense. If four-inch tile are used (there being a large flow of water), do you think it would clear itself? It runs through a stiff clay soil without any sand.

Ans.—We infer from our correspondent's letter that the trench for the tile has already been dug. If not, he might grade the bottom so as to have a uniform fall throughout the 65 rods, and still allow a half-inch or inch drop where the tile discharges into the open ditch. If the underdrain has been dug and partially laid, this may be impracticable, in which case we could clean out the open ditch carefully, widening the bottom a little if possible, and see how it worked. From description, we fancy, perhaps, the ditch will not require to be deepened, if kept clear of obstruction, though something will depend upon the depth of tile, and the probability or otherwise of it being injured by frost when full of pent-up water, a condition that might occur if the outlet got clogged. This opens up the unsettled question as to how much danger there is of buried tile being destroyed by frost when containing water. On the whole, we should be inclined to risk leaving the ditch till we saw how it answered.

GOSSIP.

MERTON LODGE HOLSTEINS.

Seventy head of big, square-bodied, wedge-shaped cows, carrying immense udders, represent the Merton Lodge Holstein herd just now, the property of Mr. H. E. George, whose splendid farm lies 1½ miles south of Crampton Station, on the Ingersoll-St. Thomas branch of the C. P. R., at the head of which is the richly-bred bull, Pontiac Hermes, bred at the Eastern Michigan Asylum farm, sired by the great Hengerveld De Kol, known as the greatest sire of A. K. females the breed has produced. Purchased in 1905 for $1,500, his owner refused an offer of $100 per cow for 10 cows for his services, his book being then full. His dam, Magadora, has a record of 15 lbs. 12 ozs., and his grandam, Netherland Hengerveld, has a record of 26 lbs. 10 ozs. in seven days. Pontiac Hermes' dam, Pontiac Atropos, has a seven-day record of 23 lbs., thus making him one of the richest-bred bulls alive. His get should be eagerly sought after. At present only one cow in the herd has been officially tested, Blondeau De Kol Star, who, at two years, made 15 lbs. 7 ozs. in seven days. Mr. George is busy building a new barn and stables, which, when completed will be one of the handsomest and best-arranged in the county, and as soon as he gets his cows in their new quarters he intends to have them officially tested as fast as they come in, as his ambition is to have a herd second to none in the country. That they will show up remarkably well in the test, we have no doubt, as there are 70-lb. cows in the herd. For immediate sale are 4 five-months-old bull calves, by Johanna Rue Lad 34989 and Sarcastic Lad, the St. Louis champion, and 4 seven months old, by Sir Heuwte De Pietertje 34581, whose dam has a milk record of 82 lbs. a day, also a few cows and heifers of all ages.
