THE PASSING HOUR...

Society weddings come under the head of fashionable things. The man who lacks push is willing to take things as they come. Most of us can see a sorrow twice as far away as a blessing. Don't wonder, Yawlowa, worried when rouge from her lips came off on the Kaiser's glove. We've known of awful rows caused by little slips of that kind.

FARMERS SEND MONEY TO CITY

Catalog Houses Drain Cash of Small Towns—Sowing Seed of Discord.

Dollar Spent With Home Merchant Upbuilds Community in Which You Live—In the End It's More Satisfactory to Buy of Local Tradesman. Cash Versus Credit.

Men are seldom more innocently employed than when they are honestly making money.

The value of a dollar is to buy just things. A dollar goes on increasing in value with all the genius and all the virtue of the world. A dollar in a university is worth more than a dollar in a jail; in some industry in a temperate, law-abiding community than in some distant mine, oil well or problematical fruit farm in distant territory.

The lack of money has brought many a community to a state of oblivion, and the community's pauperism is invariably the result of unparitric residents sending their money away to the large cities for supplies.

Catalogue Houses Sow Discord.

The retail mail order houses, as leeches in the side of rural commercialism, work day and night, in fair weather and in foul. They gnaw at a community's substance with invisible teeth.

They blind industry with their film as they are bound with a spider's web. They sow a rural discord, and the harvesters reap thistles instead of dollars.

Mail order buying builds up the large cities at the expense of the smaller cities and towns. Every dollar used in this way by the residents of a community that is not out of circulation at home and puts it into circulation many miles away.

Result of Violated Contracts.

The dollar spent with the home grocer, dry goods dealer, hardware merchant, druggist or other business man upbuilds the community in which you live.

These merchants pay taxes to support your town, repair your streets, maintain your schools and build up and sustain your churches and maintain your markets.

If the people must order inferior goods, such as many mail order houses carry, the local merchant no longer can arrange his stock to correspond with their wants, both in quality and prices. In some instances the lower prices quoted by the mail order houses are the result of violated contracts and chicanery, which have no place in an honest merchant's business.

Adapts in the Art.

The mail order houses are adepts in the art and science of preparing interesting and readable catalogues. If and critically the skill with which plausible arguments are put together and words made to say what they really do not is apparent.

When a purchaser goes to his retailer he can examine what he wishes to buy. He can look it over carefully, and if he wishes receive a guarantee from the merchant that the article is satisfactory. The guarantee is good because the retailer intends to remain in business among his friends and he cannot afford to deceive.

Substitute Goods as Original.

The catalogue houses, however, may offer to replace unsatisfactory goods, but there is the annoyance of writing claim letters, packing the goods found not satisfactory and shipping them back and waiting for the new shipment.

And there is the chance that the substitute goods will prove to be no more satisfactory than the original, and all the trouble will have to be experienced again.

When the consumer learns that it is not only easier, but much more satisfactory, to buy of the home merchant than of the catalogue house then the latter will have a much more stony path to travel than today, and it is being a coming more rough with the passing of each day because the consumer is becoming educated to his ways and methods of business.

Cash Versus Credit Business.

All that has been said is predicated on the theory that the farmer wants to do a cash business. He can do no other kind of business with the mail order houses.

Any man who accepts common decency as a standard will tell him that he has no right to send his cash to the big cities and ask for credit at the small local store.

That is not business. While such a practice is not forbidden by statute law, it is nevertheless immoral, unjust, mean. No fair minded man would have the consummate impudence to attempt a defense of such conduct.

Entitled to Cash Business.

If the local dealer is good enough to deserve the credit trade of his community he is entitled to the cash business as well. If he is not honest enough to entitle him to the patronage of the cash customer he will take advantage of the credit customer.

But if you deal honestly and fairly with him by giving him both your cash and credit trade the chances are that he will deal fairly by you.

Driven To It.

Can you make me a bureau with a secret drawer?
Yep. Place to hidé a will, eh? No! I just want to have a place where I can keep a few clothes. My wife's things occupy all the visible space—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Mme. Schumann-Heink lifted her voice above the pealing of thunder and roar of rain on the roof. * * * and the fears of the audience were dispelled."

COUNSEL GAVE STINGING ADDRESS

trial, ever heard in the criminal courts building. The crush to hear the closing argument was not exceeded even when Evelyn Thaw was giving her testimony in defense of Harry Thaw for the murder of Stanford White.

District Attorney Whitman spoke for three hours at the night session, taking out of the mouth of Jack Sullivan, witness for the defense, whom Mr. Mantion had lauded as a man deserving of the jury's commendation the words of his testimony that "Whitman wants Becker," and shouting "of course I want Becker. I want the big criminal. I want the man back of it all. I want the man who inspired and engineered this whole monstrous crime." Sullivan, sometimes known as the "king of newboys," whose real name is Jacob Reich, then came in for a scathing denunciation at the hands of the district attorney.

Reverting to the murder, the District Attorney characterized the killing of Rosenthal with dramatic emphasis.

"The crack of those pistols in Forty Third street was a defiance of our American institutions," he declared. "And the bullets from those pistols hissed a challenge to our civilization."

Becker appeared in court a few minutes later for the first time. He looked hopefully at the twelve men picked to decide his fate, then smiled at his wife sitting at the side of the jury, out of the range of vision of the room. Mrs. Becker returned the smile and her husband dropped into his chair. He fixed his eyes on the jury box and waited for Justice Seabury to begin. With Mrs. Becker were her brother and her husband's brothers, Jackson and John, the latter a lieutenant of detectives.

This defendant, began Justice Seabury, is charged with murder in the first degree. The people do not claim that he killed Rosenthal maliciously. But they charge him with procuring the commission of the crime.

"If this defendant as a lieutenant of police, had a murder done, justice demanded that he be convicted and punished by being sentenced to death. But he must be proved guilty beyond reasonable doubt."

"The law says the defendant is entitled to reasonable doubt, not all doubt."
