The Diamond From the Sky
 By ROY L. MCCARDELL
 Copyright, 1915, by Roy L. McCardell

"It's a plant, Strap" cautions a little rat faced hobo who has skulked in the back of the car and has given no hand in hauling Arthur from the jaws of death.
 "Whether mean a plant?" asks the one addressed as Strap.
 "Can't you see? It's a railroad bull." retorts the rat faced tramp. "Would any rat eat wearin' the soup and fish?" and he points to Arthur's now dirty and disheveled evening attire.
 "Maybe de gink got it handed to him," suggests the other tramp who had assisted Arthur into the "side door Pullman."
 "Aw, can't yo see dem glad rags is his'n? Why, dey are dooty, but dey fits him!"
 "You are right, Scotty," said the leader of the trio, and without ado he struck Arthur a terrific blow behind the ear that stunned him for the moment, and the next instant Arthur felt himself fighting wildly with the three strong and active outcasts.
 Meanwhile, what of the diamond from the sky? Where was it?
 Bob Adams had swept it into the mail bag without seeing it, the mail sorter at the postoffice had given no cry to see it fall upon the sorting table and blaze back its sinister gleams to the incandescent light above. Where was the diamond from the sky?

 The watchman relieved at dawn on the leading platform outside might have known as he stepped across the mail bags marked "Repair." But the side of his right shoe just grazed it. The truck driver might have known as he loaded the bags to be repaired, for like many a poor man he held a fortune in his hands for once at least in his poverty stricken life and never knew it.
 Held by its clasp in the ravellings of the inner seam at the bottom of the bag, the heirloom of the Stanleys rested in the darkness of the soiled interior of the service worn old mail bag. The truckman held it in his anus and tossed it on top of his load. But his fingers just missed the feel of it. And so he threw away his fortune, perhaps an evil one, and drove on with his mind upon other matters than fortunes or missing gems of price.
 Down the city street from his humble lodging place in the poorest part of the town came Quabba, musician and a traveler. And he traveled not alone. With him was his orchestra and his collector of external revenue. True, his orchestra was but a barrel organ and his collector of external revenue a monkey, but the organ was a fairly good one, sweet of tone, and the monkey was a simian of sorts and his name was Clarence.
 So it was that Quabba was gay of heart and sang to himself as he trudged along. Only a poor hunchback organ grinder with his monkey was Quabba. But his heart was light, his conscience untroubled and his appetite, alas, only too good. The whole wide world was his, and no man was his master, and so Quabba the hunchback sang and winked at the monkey, Clarence, as if to say: "We haven't a penny, Clarence, but what an appetite we'll have for breakfast—so soon as we pick up the price of one!"
 "Hi there, get out of the way!" shouted a rough voice, and Quabba, roused from his reflections, stopped aside just in time to avoid being struck by a passing truck. A bit of the vehicle threw an empty mail bag marked with chalk "Repair," from a pile of those at the back of the truck.
