MAN.
What phantom shapes do mortals eye pursue,
How tangible seems all we have in view.

What petty jealousies, what trifling pride,
What inward thoughts we vainly strive to hide.

We fail to realize that the world will know us for
Not what we'd seem, but simply what we are.

What sphere can be imagined of, or dreamt,
Where mortals dwell, from grief and care exempt?

What eminence can man himself attain,
What glory worth the name! such weakness gain!

Our greatest schemes indeed are fickle wights,
Our grandest climbs are but feeble heights.

Even kings and emperors in pomp and show,
Are mere meteoric flash in transient glow.

What man would be, without a guiding hand,
Twice guardian task, indeed, to understand.

Man's powers e'en in greatest intensity
Are scarce a day in his immensity.

CHINESE NEW YEAR.

Some Special Observances That Americans Might do Well to Adopt.

The Mongolian 1st of January Festival is said to be the most complete Holiday Season kept by any Nation.

"The New Year's festival of the Chinese, said to be the most complete holiday season kept by any nation of the earth, is celebrated wherever a Chinese Chinaman is found, whether in Peking or New York," writes Belle M. Brain in Woman's Home Companion. "It is a movable festival, falling on any date between Jan. 21 and Feb. 19. Preparations for the great holiday begin weeks beforehand. The accumulated dirt of many months disappears as if by magic. Even the Chinaman himself passes through the cleansing process, washing his clothes and bathing his person, the latter being a great event in the lives of a few, since it occurs but once a year!"

"Buildings of every description are elaborately decorated. Flowers are in great demand, the favorite being the Chinese narcissus. The prospect of happiness for the year is believed to be in proportion to the number of flower stalks produced from a single bulb."

"During the closing days of the old year Chinese streets present a busy and animated scene. Shops are thronged with customers eagerly laying in large quantities of food, clothing and New Year's gifts. Debtors and creditors are seen hurrying to and fro endeavoring to settle their accounts, for, according to a most commendable custom, all debts must be paid or settled in some satisfactory manner before the New Year dawns. To meet these liabilities shopkeepers offer their goods at a discount of prices, and families frequently part with odd bits of bric-a-brac, curious relics and valuable ornaments for a sum pitifully small. No disgrace is equal to being found on New Year's morning with an unpaid debt. On the other hand, the creditor who fails to collect his debts at this time may not press them again for many months. He therefore pursues his debtor far into the night, continuing his search into the New Year's day if necessary. This he may do if he carries a lighted lantern to indicate that he is still engaged in last night's business and has not discovered that the day has dawned."

How Strauss Played the Chant.
The teacher who influenced Strauss most was one Joseph Drescher, the choir-master of St. Stephen's church, in Vienna, who tried to get the waltzes out of the boy's head and put in their place hymns and chorals. In this undertaking he met with indifferent success, for the worshippers in one of the Vienna churches were startled on a Sunday morning when there poured forth from the organ, filling the gloomy building, its enchanting notes, a waltz instead of the solemn Gregorian chant to which they were accustomed. It was Johann Strauss, Jr., who had taken the organist's place and substituted his own favorite selection for the usual sacred music, much to the dismay of the pious folk and the amusement of the younger people in the congregation.—Edward A. Steiner in Woman's Home Companion.

Preventive Measures.
A French prefect wrote to a mayor requesting him to take precautions against the cholera, which had broken out in his department. The mayor was rather puzzled at these instructions, which appeared vague to him, but after deep thought he answered that he and his electors were prepared for the plague.

On inquiring into the measures taken by the worthy mayor in order to ascertain their efficiency, it appeared that he had caused many graves to be dug as there were inhabitants.

A Good Plan.
Brown—Do you still employ Dr. Pelleter?
Jones—Why shouldn't we? Up to the present time he hasn't killed any of us.

Brown—And when you are all killed off you'll get a new physician? Well, I don't know but that is as good a plan as any.—Boston Transcript.

ECLEMA ON HANDS

So Bad that Water Would Ooze Out and Drop on the Floor. Hands Full of Water Blisters. Doctor Could Not Relieve. First Application of CUTICURA Stopped Itching and Induced Sleep. Cured in One Month.

I had eczema on my hands so bad that when I shut them, the water would ooze out and drop on the floor. My hands were covered with blisters of a white color. I was under the care of a doctor for about a month, but he did me no good. I was advised to try CUTICURA, and, did so, and it was wonderful what effect they had. The first application stopped that dreadful itching, I slept at once, was cured in four weeks. March 21, '90. M. A. COUGHLIN, Enniscorthy, N.D.

BABY'S FACE MASS OF SORES

When my little sister was four months old her cheeks became red and inflamed. Small pimples broke out over her face and it was one mass of scales, which almost closed her eyes and reached into the corners of her mouth. For several weeks a physician attended her, but without success. We bought a cake of CUTICURA, and, after a few days' use, the sores disappeared. The next day the sores were all healed. The next day the sores were all healed. The next day the sores were all healed.

BEGIN WITH THE BLOOD

CUTICURA TREATMENT begins with the blood, and with the blood, the skin is purified. It is a purifying and blood-purifying medicine. It is a purifying and blood-purifying medicine. It is a purifying and blood-purifying medicine.

The soap is an insect highwayman. Wasps have often been observed to rob bees while these industrious workers, laden with the fruits of an expedition, are returning to the hive.

Between the ages of fifteen and forty-five, the time when womanhood begins and motherhood ends, it is estimated that the aggregate term of woman's suffering is ten years. But time is not all that is lost. Those years of suffering steal the bloom from the cheeks, the brightness from the eyes, the fairness from the form. They write their record in many a crease and wrinkle. There is a boon to woman in Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It promotes perfect regularity, dries up debilitating drains, heals ulceration, cures female weakness, and establishes her system, purifies her organs, in vigorous and permanent health. No other medicine can do for woman what is done by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

THE SOCIETY LADY.

Didn't Have a Cent Before She Married.

But now Everything Belongs to her, From her Husband's Large Salary to the Small Pug Dog.

"James," she said as she swept down the walk from her house to the carriage, in all the glory of a gorgeous gown and Paris hat, "James, my horses do not look well groomed. Are you certain that you see to this properly?"

"Sure, madam, it's two hours a day each that they have of the curry and brush. Their coats are like satin."

"My carriage, James, looks rusty."

"You can see your face in it as in a looking glass, mum."

"My husband is so brightly polished," "The second man put in all the morning on it, mum."

"Marie," to the maid in the smart white cap by her side, holding the pug "Marie, tell Peter to keep my lawn in better trim. And, Marie, see that the parlor maid draws the shades in the morning. I will not have my curtains and my carpets in my house ruined by the sun. And, Marie, say to the florist that if he cannot send the carnations, the next hour understand another establishment will be patronized."

"Yes, madam. Anything else madam wishes?"

"No—yes, Marie. Say to the caterer that when I give a dinner I must have serving men who know how to wait on a table, not bricklayers. At my dinners and in my own house I purpose having things done as I wish them to be in the style for which I am willing to pay. Now give Fif—"

"James, drive to the modiste's. I wish to feel sure that that wretched creature will surely send home my evening gown tonight. Then go to my milliner's, then to Byler's, then to the marketman's, then to Mr. Plumptre, afterward to Mrs. Tomlin's and on the way home stop at Mrs. Elderdon's. No, we will not call for my husband. Dr. J. Callofton Kidglove says he needs exercise, and he'd better walk or take the car home—"

"Attend to me and to my property as I order out you go. You hear me?"

"Yes, madam."

"Drive on!"

"And to think," muttered James, as he brought the lash down upon the shining flanks of the matched blacks, "that when the old man married her she had a pimple in the world, and to me certain edge she has used to speak in the past a quiet since, nor has she had any money left her. But it's all hers—the house, the furniture, the dresses and the jewels, the horses and carriages, the dinners, the parties, all hers, including the $30,000 a year the old man be after making, as-laying and ariding in the street cars, when the poor devil's too tired to walk. Faith, 'tis his devil's family I have driven for where the whole outfit, including the master's income, belongs to the mistress, and all bought with his money. Sure, it's a woman I'd be myself for an instant if I could be after making the stuff so easily doing nothing!"—Washington Star.

Knew the Voice.

A dear old lady who lived up on Marshall street died suddenly the other day. Her death was completely unexpected. She had been persuaded to speak into the receiver of a phonograph owned by her son-in-law. It turned out to be a remarkably good record, for the old lady had a peculiarly shrill voice, and as she sang her favorite hymn, the phonograph reproduced her voice so perfectly.

Now, there is a colored girl in the family who possesses all the superstitions of her race. A couple of days after the funeral she was dusting the furniture in the sitting room when she inadvertently turned the switch that started the phonograph. As luck would have it, the cylinder was the one containing the old lady's hymn, and it rang out with startling distinctness. The colored girl stood there, staring at the spot, gasping for breath. It was truly a minute before she quite recovered her faculties, and then, with a yell of "Foh de Lawd's sake! Missy Liza's come back!" she ran down the stairs, singing her favorite hymn.
