Nervous?

There are many causes of nervousness, but poor blood heads the list. The doctors call it anemia. The blood lacks red corpuscles. At your first opportunity, consult your doctor about taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Ask him if he has anything better for weakness, debility, nervousness. If he has, take it. If not, take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Get well, that's what you are after.

March Winds.
In March the breezes skip around
And try to make a showing
In their own chosen special line
By strong and constant blowing.
In cities round the buildings tall
And in the lands bucolic
They dance around from morn till night
In never ending frolic.

They take a pretty maiden's dress
And in a manner shocking
Show to the pop-eyed rubbernecks
About an inch of stocking.
They catch a tall and shiny hat,
And soon the small boy, grinning,
Observes it under horses' feet.
Go up the roadway spinning.

In whiskers long and overgrown
They take the lot of pleasure
By playing on them soft and low
Some light and tuneful measure.
And when they find a dainty crop
In folds and graceful creases
They hang around them lovingly
And play the latest pieces.

Sometimes when we are walking out
They play a hateful caper
By throwing clinders in our eyes
And dust and bits of paper
And chunks of landscape and a lot
Of things that we might mention,
Until we wish they wouldn't pay
Us quite so much attention.

Frivolous Sweetbreads.

"A true sweetbread is perhaps the most healthy meat that can be eaten," said a doctor, "but you are never able to get it. The sweetbread proper is the pancreas, which is one of the most effective agents in promoting digestion, but the sweetbread of trade is usually obtained from the throats of cattle and is what is called the thyroid gland. This gland rests against the windpipe, and, while its texture is similar to that of the real sweetbread, it has not the same beneficial qualities. But some butchers, in order to make money, pass off the salivary gland, that which furnishes the saliva, located in the cheeks, for a sweetbread. This is the most inferior substitute of all. The pancreas, or real sweetbread, is a most dainty morsel. It is of triangular form, while the sweetbreads obtained from the throat are of an oval form. But what is the use of making people dissatisfied? They have been eating thyroid and salivary glands for sweetbreads for years and have been satisfied. But then they have never tasted the real thing."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

CAP AND GOWN.

The Dainty Lace Nightcap is Fashion's Latest Decree.

It sounds a little strange, but it is nevertheless a fact, that every day that passes the nightcap finds stronger votaries among the leaders of fashion. Indeed, more than once recently the item "a nightcap of antique lace" has figured among a list of wedding presents to a society bride. Nor is this whim entirely without reason. In the first place, there are occasions when, invalided, our dearest friends are admitted to our presence in bed, and it is not only troublesome, but incongruous, for a person who is supposed to be too ill to take any interest in such matters, to possess a well dressed head. But what an alternative the loosely knotted hair presents, even though it be carefully brushed!

Now, a nightcap not only conceals any shortcomings of the coiffure, but will also, on ordinary occasions, serve to disguise the presence of the harmless necessary curling pin, besides keeping in place throughout the night those elaborate waves the hairdressers' art makes possible.

The dainty little cap in our sketch was fashioned of the finest of muslin, edged with goffered frills of the fabric mingled with lace. The bunches of baby ribbon over either ear give a quaintness to this little headress which could be imparted in no other way, not to mention the note of color they furnished, for the blue of the ribbon matched the wearer's eyes.

The nightgown worn with this cap was beautiful indeed. Beautiful in outline and fairlike in texture, it was fashioned with a deep square yoke of old English embroidery well cut away at the neck. At the back this yoke was of equal depth, and there, as in front, the skirt was so treated with tucks alternating with strips of insertion that it fitted the yoke exactly.

The sleeves were exceptionally short and were cut in one piece, a drawing about four inches above the arm giving the appearance of a separate frill, the edge of which was trimmed with maltese lace.

A "Self Helper" For an Invalid.
Most people have seen the convenient arrangements in hospitals by which helpless patients can move in bed without having to call for the nurse. In one's own house such conveniences are not possible, but willing fingers can make quite a good substitute for the poor home invalid. A length of rope is required sufficiently long for the patient to catch hold of its center with ease. The rope has a strong loop at either end, which slips over the knobs of the bedposts. Rope is not the softest thing for delicate fingers to grasp, so the place where the invalid will take hold has about half a yard of the rope covered first with wadding and then with soft knitting. A long piece of garter stitch knitting suffices for this, and when completed it is folded round the wadded rope and joined along the two edges.

This simple plan is a comfort to the patient and by enabling him or her to move from the one position creates a feeling of independence and the happy inner conviction, "I'm sure I'm getting stronger."

Something For Travelers.

Travelers may find this cabin bag of use on shipboard, where room is at a premium.
The most useful size is 32 by 17 inches, with an extra two inch border all round. The bag can be made in any of the pretty art linens and supplied with three hangers along the top. The pockets hold all sorts of small trifles—boots, brushes, nightdress and all toilet paraphernalia. They should either be run with an elastic along the tops or else made to button with a flap, as otherwise the motion of the vessel will scatter the contents broadcast.

Correct Thing Is Given.

The young man who purposes to give a pair of gloves to a girl nowadays wishes to show her that he knows what's what has to go farther down in his pockets than he used to. The rage for long gloves is at its height at present, so much so that even the big shops have trouble in keeping a supply on hand. To be the real thing they must be long and of black glove kid. Thirty buttons is the correct length to be just right, and for these one must pay $4.50 a pair. White gloves of elbow length have been relegated to the ranks of the things that were.

BOILS ALL OVER HIS FACE AND NECK

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS DID FOR HIM WHAT FOUR DOCTORS FAILED TO DO

KEEWATIN, Ont., July 28th, 1896.
Messrs. THE T. MINSTER CO., LTD., TORONTO, ONT.

DEAR SIR:—I am writing to let you know what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I am a young man, twenty years old, and a year ago last March I began to feel dull and sick, and was greatly troubled with boils coming out on my face and neck, mostly on the right side. I would no sooner get rid of one than I would have, perhaps, two or three more appear.

I had four doctors trying to cure me but they had very little success. They would stop them for a month or six weeks and then they would be as bad as ever again.

Almost every patent medicine, advertised to cure boils, I could get hold of, I tried, but still without success. At last one day, last spring, someone happened to say, "Why not try taking Burdock Blood Bitters for the blood?" I was willing to try anything and immediately sent for a bottle, but as the time was doubtful if it would be of any use. However, I used that bottle and while I was taking it I began to feel better, although I still had a few boils but not nearly such bad ones. I did not miss any work, while otherwise I used to miss, sometimes, a week out of every month. I kept on taking the medicine until I had taken six bottles, and needless to say, I was not sorry I did so when I tell you I have not had a boil appear for the past three months. Every body was surprised when they heard that Burdock Blood Bitters had done for me what four doctors failed to do. If any sufferers are afflicted with boils, I would strongly advise them to use B.B.B. It makes you feel like a new man. I always keep a bottle in my house, now, as I think it is a medicine that should be in every household.

Yours truly,
HENRY A. SMITH.
