SURPRISE SOAP LATE SENATOR D. WARK ABSOLUTE

PASSING OF THE OLDEST LEGIS-LATOR IN THE WORLD.

In His 102nd Year, His Feat of Living Was a Mechanical Wonder Worthy More Than Passing Thought-Force of Dynamite Discounted-His Experiences Overpowers the Thinking Imagination—His Public Career.

In Senator Wark's death the oldest Legislator in the world has passed away. Extreme age and weakness are given as the reasons, there being no trace of disease in the weary old frame that was knit before Waterloo was fought. As a mechanical wonder, the feat of living more than a hundred years is worth more than a passing thought. If one could calculate the physical horse-power exerted during his life by a man of such age, the force of dynamite would appear trifling indeed. The experiences a human being of his age must have undergone, even had his life been passed much less eventfully than that of Senator Wark, must be equally overpowering to the imagination. Life surely was an old story for the Senator, and one cannot help feeling that the end must have been met with con-In Senator Wark's death the oldest ing.

On Feb. 19, 1804, David Wark was born in Londonderry, Ireland. He settled in New Brunswick the year he was of age, and true to his race, almost immediately began to manifest an interest in politics.

Mr. Wark entered Parliamentary work in the New Brunswick Assembly bly in 1842, and sat until 1851, when he was summoned to the Legislative Council of his Province. One of the points agreed upon at Confederation was that in the manning of the Senate was that in the manning of the Senate a certain number of Legislative councilors should be appointed from each Province, and that both sides of politics should be represented. Mr. Wark was a Liberal, and was chosen as one of the Liberal representatives of New Brunswick in the Upper House. He saw Confederation completed, he sat through four Administrations; he discussed all the subjects that have come up from time to time, and atcome up from time to time, and at-tended thirty-six sessions of Parlia-

Senator Wark's death leaves but one member of the Upper House, Senator Miller, who was appointed at Confederation. There are, nevertheless, some aged men in the Red Chamber. The octogenarians number among them Hon. J. C. Aikins, Hon. Boucher are Reveloperville. Hon. Alexander. Viment. Waiter—I'm sorry, sir. We have no hash on hand to-day, sir.

them Hon. J. C. Alkins, Hon. Boucher Vidal, Hon. Peter McLaren, and Hon. J. R. Gowan, Mr. Alkins and Mr. Vidal are total abstainers, and no doubt to this fact attribute their vitality. In the group a very prominent man is Mr. Gowan, who has served as a soldier, a judge, an educationist, and a legislator. For forty years he administered justice in the County of Simcoe with marked success, bearing all the difficulties of pioneer life, and giving his fellow-countrymen the advantage his fellow-countrymen the advantage of his extensive and accurate knowledge of the law. Called to the Upper House, he has been one of the ablest of law-givers there, applying to constructive work a trained and impartial mind.

structive work a trained and impartial mind.

Senator Wark's physique is sufficiently described by his extreme age, and by the fact that his mind was clear to the last. In build he might be described as a "big little man." He lived simply, and was most careful of late years in his diet. He ate no beef, mutton, or pork, but partook of fish and fowl. His breakfast consisted of oatmeal porridge and a slice of bread. Another slice of bread and a sup of tea for his evening meal. Pie and pudding had been banished from his table for many years; but we do not infer that in his younger days he lived according to all his later rules. The Senator was a total abstainer, and a man singularly devout. On both sides of politics his venerable figure will be missed; and although in no sense of the word was his death untimely, it is simple truth to say that it will be profoundly regretted by a wide circle of friends in public and private life.

A Fateful Needle.

Norway tradition invests with a peculiar interest a natural stone obelisk some twenty-five feet in height near the old church of Augvaldsnals, on Karmeon Island. The pillar leans toward the walls of the old church, and the peasantry believe that when at last the tip of the obelisk shall finally rest against the wall of the church the world will come to an end. Even the minister shares this superstition, and the stone has been reduced in height by sundry chippings when it has seemed that it approached dangerously near to the wall.

The stone is known as St. Mary's Needle and is celebrated throughout that locality. A Fateful Needle.

The Abyssinians, even at the court of Emperor Menelik, still eat their meat raw, inserting a strip in the mouth and cotting it off when there is enough for a bite. A Frenchman who died in Constanti-

HOW TO WIN A HUSBAND.

Woman's sphere in this 20th century is not limited any more than is man's. She can occupy almost any business position or profession, and yet the popular view of womanhood is that she best fits the position of wife and mother and head of the household. Every girl should know her heart and also know that her womanly system is equal to the strain of marriage. If a girl is nervous and irritable ten chances to one it is due to some trouble peculiar to womanhood.

to one it is due to some trouble peculiar to womanhood.

Cupid has no place in a girl's heart if she is nervous and irritable, feels dragged down, worn out for no reason that she can think of. The weak back, dizzy spells and black circles about the eyes are only symptoms. Go to the source of the trouble and correct the irregularity. Stop the drains on the womanly system and the other symptoms will disappear. This can be done easily and intelligently. So sure of it is the World's Dispensary Medical Association, the proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Faworite Prescription, that they offer $500 reward for women who cannot be cured of leucorrhea, female weakness, prolapsus, or falling of the womb. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

THE WEREWOLF.

The word "werewolf" simply means a man transformed into a wolf, and the belief in such transformation seems to have been at one time widely diffused over all the countries of Europe, Asia and some parts of Africa.

According to the ancients, a man thus transformed into a wolf or other ravenous beast was believed to become possessed of all the powers of such a beast in addition to his human abilities to reason. His appetite also became enormous and could only be appeased by being glutted upon hu-man flesh. During the latter centuries of the dark ages the belief in werewolves was as common and as wide-spread as was the belief in witches, which it in some respects resembled. The belief, senseless as it was, gave rise to much brutal persecution of the accused, and the various systems of torture were usually successful in get-ting a confession of guilt and the subsequent burning or hanging of the wretched confessor.

In Great Britain, where wolves were scarcely known, the werewolf tales of the continent were hardly credited, but later on, even in "enlightened England," they believed that witches could transform themselves into cats could transform themselves into cats and hares, a belief at least analogous to the "loup-garou" superstition of the dents were also heard, when it was continent. continent.

DEFECTIVE SIGHT.

Some Callings That Are Bad For Persons With Weak Eyes. ** Systematic examination of the eyes of school children seldom fails to show that a considerable proportion of them have defective sight and will therefore be placed at a disadvantage if in after life they engage in employments for which normal vision is desirable. Some useful suggestions on the practical side of this question will be found in Dr. Wilhelm Feilchenfeld's "Gesundheitspflege des Auges." He says, for instance, that sufferers from sensitive eyes, with easily irritated conjunctiva or with chronic or frequently occurring inflammation of the lids, ought not to engage in work which is either assoclated with the production of much dust, such as baking or milling, or which involves exposure to a dazzling light, such as the occupation of a furnace man. Individuals in which symptoms of ocular fatigue easily come on ought not to choose an occupation which requires straining of the eyes by long continued near work, such as sewing, knitting, copying or shorthand writing. Individuals with progressive shortsightedness must avoid all occupations which entail great exertion upon the eyes. They should not engage in study or become clerks or mechanics, tailors, dressmakers, fancy needleworkers or quilters.-London Lancet.

PEOPLE WHO SUCCEED.

They Have a Very High Sense of the Way to Do Things.

If there is that in your nature which demands the best and will take nothing less and you do not demoralize this standard by the habit of deterioration in everything you do, you will achieve distinction in some line if you have the persistence and determination to fol-low your ideal.

But if you are satisfied with the cheap and shoddy, the botched and slovenly, if you are not particular about quality in your work or in your environment or in your personal habits, have not confined themselves to the beaten tracks; they have never been satisfied to do things just as others do them, but always a little better. They always pushed things that came to their hands a little higher up, a little farther on. It is this little higher up, this little farther on, that counts in the quality of life's work. It is the constant effort to be first class in everything one attempts that conquers the heights of excellence.

The Bird Woman. In the records of the journeyings of Lewis and Clark it is written of Sacaawea, the "wonderful bird woman," that she "contributed a full man's share to the success of the expedition, pesides taking care of her baby." Yet not a cent did she receive for her services. Her husband, whom the explorers mention as an idler and a wife beater, received $800.33, including the price of a horse and lodge purchased Cat Medicine.

The ancient physicians had a firm belief in the healing powers of different portions of the cat, probably from some confusion existing in their minds with regard to its own nine lives. One of them gives as a valuable recipe to cure fevers two pints of water mixed with digestive organs.
