

From Glasgow on Steam to Come to the

As you see, the ship is a fine one, and the crew is well equipped. The passengers are all well, and the weather is fine.

By rail, the journey is very comfortable. The train is well equipped, and the service is excellent. The passengers are all well, and the weather is fine.

In my way to the north, I saw many beautiful scenes. The mountains were very high, and the valleys were very fertile. The people were all well, and the weather was fine.

Such are the views from a tall mountain. The scenery is very beautiful, and the people are all well. The weather is fine, and the air is very fresh.

The all too many mountains are very high. The valleys are very fertile, and the people are all well. The weather is fine, and the air is very fresh.

When the water is very deep, the boats are very small. The people are all well, and the weather is fine. The air is very fresh, and the scenery is very beautiful.

Among the many things, as they did, the people are all well. The weather is fine, and the air is very fresh. The scenery is very beautiful, and the mountains are very high.

From the Old Glasgow, the people are all well. The weather is fine, and the air is very fresh. The scenery is very beautiful, and the mountains are very high.

From the Old Glasgow, the people are all well. The weather is fine, and the air is very fresh. The scenery is very beautiful, and the mountains are very high.

From the Old Glasgow, the people are all well. The weather is fine, and the air is very fresh. The scenery is very beautiful, and the mountains are very high.

him, that the young king who heart beat to high with every breath of feeling of life, and youth, and joy, should, ere many hours had passed, be carried into that grey castle a lifeless and bloody corpse. There was but the dark spot on all this white and dreary waste.

It was under small clump of pines, and their aspect appeared still more gloomy. The setting, contrast to the dancing waters of every thing around. As the king passed the spot, a presentiment of evil seemed to cross his mind.

A cold shudder ran through every vein, and popular superstition would have said that he had trodden upon his grave. In this instance it was true. Three dark-looking figures, armed and maned, darted from beneath the shadow of the pines.

They had long understood each other, and now they talked of love, till, at last, in the embrace of his spirit, the lord of Glamis proposed that above the grave of their murdered monarch they should plant their tomb.

It was deemed a fair thought by the happy lady. She yielded to his wish. They took her few child-like, smiling, eyes, and called in the shade of the departed monarch to bear witness to their truth, they solemnly and irreversibly pledged their faith to each other. It is said that the spirit of the monarch did bear witness to their vows—that his shade appeared as they pledged them; and while the mid-day sun sank beneath a black cloud as if unwilling to look upon the hardened hearts of such, that he passed upon them with a frowning aspect, and raising his finger in a warning, threatening posture, slowly shook his head and disappeared.

Whether it be so or not, I cannot tell; but certain it is, that the lady was brought home senseless to the castle, and the pale lips and haggard aspect of their lord, showed the poisoned effect of the royal matter. They were as two dead men, and when they awoke, they were as two dead men.

One little innocent was drowned in the lake; another fell from the battlements of the castle and was dashed to pieces; and a third was gone to death by a wild stag, at no great distance from the place where now we sit, as if its guiltless blood had been spilt to appease the manes of the murdered monarch. Moreover, their tempers could not agree. They were as two angry men, and when they met, they were as two angry men.

When he learned that the monarch was dead, he was very angry. He was very angry, and he was very angry. He was very angry, and he was very angry. He was very angry, and he was very angry.

Years passed away, and it was not till that year which you have just remembered, that the lord of Glamis was daily wont to travel. Some said it was in expiation of an unknown sin; others that it was a self-inflicted penance; and a few, more charitably disposed, that he there poured forth his daily prayers for the repose of the murdered monarch's soul.

was a polluted creature, against whom the hand of every one was raised, and for whom there was no pity. By speaking kindly to him, it is in almost every case, confidence, which he stood still, and allowed me to stand close beside him. I asked him the reason of his extraordinary appearance.

He told me that he had been for years a prisoner in the prison, which, though at the time he was in the prison, he was in the prison. He was in the prison, and he was in the prison.

On Saturday last, about seven o'clock in the evening, the No. 1, engine-house, of South Hill Colliery, in this district, the property of the Colliery, was destroyed by fire. It appears to have originated in a coal containing a quantity of sulphur. At that time, the engine-house was in the process of being repaired.

On Saturday last, about seven o'clock in the evening, the No. 1, engine-house, of South Hill Colliery, in this district, the property of the Colliery, was destroyed by fire. It appears to have originated in a coal containing a quantity of sulphur.

On Saturday last, about seven o'clock in the evening, the No. 1, engine-house, of South Hill Colliery, in this district, the property of the Colliery, was destroyed by fire. It appears to have originated in a coal containing a quantity of sulphur.

On Saturday last, about seven o'clock in the evening, the No. 1, engine-house, of South Hill Colliery, in this district, the property of the Colliery, was destroyed by fire. It appears to have originated in a coal containing a quantity of sulphur.

On Saturday last, about seven o'clock in the evening, the No. 1, engine-house, of South Hill Colliery, in this district, the property of the Colliery, was destroyed by fire. It appears to have originated in a coal containing a quantity of sulphur.

On Saturday last, about seven o'clock in the evening, the No. 1, engine-house, of South Hill Colliery, in this district, the property of the Colliery, was destroyed by fire. It appears to have originated in a coal containing a quantity of sulphur.

On Saturday last, about seven o'clock in the evening, the No. 1, engine-house, of South Hill Colliery, in this district, the property of the Colliery, was destroyed by fire. It appears to have originated in a coal containing a quantity of sulphur.

was on the river to the Brooklyn, where she arrived in the afternoon. The ship is the first Clyde vessel that ever arrived in any port of the Atlantic coast since the opening of the Panama Canal, and she is the first vessel that has arrived at the Brooklyn, with tea direct from the East. Her cargo, however, is the first importation of the last tea crop, and the sale is looked forward to with some interest by the trade, who have been waiting with impatience for this importation.

His Majesty's sloop Orpheus, Commander E. J. Carpenter, arrived yesterday afternoon in company with the Albatross, bringing Despatches from the Right Hon. Vice-Admiral Sir George Cockburn; these might have been sent by the Orpheus, which was compelled to come to England in consequence of a leak, which has been repaired, and she is now on her way to the West Indies. She was captured at Bermuda last month, but though the leak was repaired, she was compelled to come to England in consequence of a leak, which has been repaired, and she is now on her way to the West Indies.

On Saturday last, about seven o'clock in the evening, the No. 1, engine-house, of South Hill Colliery, in this district, the property of the Colliery, was destroyed by fire. It appears to have originated in a coal containing a quantity of sulphur.

On Saturday last, about seven o'clock in the evening, the No. 1, engine-house, of South Hill Colliery, in this district, the property of the Colliery, was destroyed by fire. It appears to have originated in a coal containing a quantity of sulphur.

On Saturday last, about seven o'clock in the evening, the No. 1, engine-house, of South Hill Colliery, in this district, the property of the Colliery, was destroyed by fire. It appears to have originated in a coal containing a quantity of sulphur.

On Saturday last, about seven o'clock in the evening, the No. 1, engine-house, of South Hill Colliery, in this district, the property of the Colliery, was destroyed by fire. It appears to have originated in a coal containing a quantity of sulphur.

On Saturday last, about seven o'clock in the evening, the No. 1, engine-house, of South Hill Colliery, in this district, the property of the Colliery, was destroyed by fire. It appears to have originated in a coal containing a quantity of sulphur.

On Saturday last, about seven o'clock in the evening, the No. 1, engine-house, of South Hill Colliery, in this district, the property of the Colliery, was destroyed by fire. It appears to have originated in a coal containing a quantity of sulphur.

On Saturday last, about seven o'clock in the evening, the No. 1, engine-house, of South Hill Colliery, in this district, the property of the Colliery, was destroyed by fire. It appears to have originated in a coal containing a quantity of sulphur.

The

Vol. II. Morning Courier.

ONTARIO, TUESDAY, MAY 17, 1896. We opened yesterday to some of the members of the third report of the Commission for Inquiry into the condition of the poor classes in Ontario. The principal points, which every circumstance, opinion, and suggestion contained, go to support, the humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario.

The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario. The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario. The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario.

The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario. The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario. The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario.

The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario. The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario. The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario.

The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario. The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario. The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario.

The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario. The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario. The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario.

The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario. The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario. The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario.

The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario. The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario. The humane humanity between the supply and demand for the labour in Ontario.