When Will It End?

The policy of plum-picking, piecemeal and general extravagance is having its natural effect on the minds of electors, the majority of whom swung to the P. Party in the elections of May 1909. A general reaction has set in and a current of strong feeling is running with great force against the Government, which is increasing daily in volume and intensity. The extraordinary grants of timber areas, the distribution of so many of them among relatives and supporters of Government men, the giving-out in the way of patronage fees, and salaries, the carnival of general extravagance, are doing of the Government what is alarming the thoughtful men of the community and they are asking how long such things will last, when it will be possible for the electorate to put an end to these things, and for the reign of reason to commence again. The past of the Morris Government affords no hope for the future. Indeed, the outlook is nothing but one of wild extravagance, and much anxiety prevails as to how far such will-o'-the-wisp financing can go on without landing Newfoundland into such a financial bog that she will be unable

Tragedy of the Sea.

THE PRETORIAN HAS A SUCCESSION OF GALES—DURING THE PROGRESS OF ONE A SEA SWEEPS A CHILD NAMED MORGAN AND THIRD OFFICER BALLANTINE OVERBOARD.

The s.s. Pretorian arrived here at 11 a.m. to-day. She left Liverpool at 4 p.m. Saturday last and from the start had a succession of gales, mostly from the westward, with some running mountains high. Wednesday last the weather was more than ordinarily boisterous, and at 8 o'clock that evening a very high head sea ran. One exceptionally high sea was encountered and the ship made a very heavy plunge, shipping a large quantity of water on the after part of the vessel. The sea which ran on board struck Messrs. Mason and Walton, and the former was thrown with great violence against the wheel house and was severely cut about the head, while the latter received a sprained ankle from the nasty fall he also received. About an hour later Miss Mary Morgan, aged 14, was found to be missing, and a thorough search of the ship was made for her, but no tidings of her whereabouts could be had, and sorrowfully the captain and officers concluded the child had been washed overboard and drowned. Enquiries elicited the fact that she had been last seen on the after deck talking to Mr. Arthur Ballantine, the 3rd officer, just previous to the incident reported above. As Mr. Ballantine could not be found also, it was surmised that the same sea which struck Miss Morgan also took Mr. Ballantine overboard, and that when this occurred he was going to Miss Morgan's rescue. Miss Morgan, accompanied by her mother, was coming to St. John's to join her father, who is captain of Baine Johnston's Atilla. Mr. Morgan on learning of her little girl's tragic death collapsed from grief, and the awful occurrence spread a gloom over the whole ship for the rest of the voyage. Mr. Mason is recovering from the ugly wounds received, and on arrival here to-day when ashore to get medical treatment. Mr. Walton, who sacrificed his life in going to her rescue. Mr. Ballantine was 29 years old and in the prime of life and was a favorite with all on board the ship. The ship had on board 82 saloon passengers, 95 second class and 158 steerage. The following arrived for here: P. A. Ayre, Rev. T. A. Pendergast, Miss E. Carberry, Mrs. J. Collins, Miss Wilkinson, H. E. and Mrs. Cowan, T. J. Duley, Miss G. Duley, Miss H. Duley, Miss Fielding, Miss Greaves, J. J. Harvie, Miss Harvie, Miss J. L. and Mrs. McCarthy, Mr. Macnab, Rev. J. L. and Mrs. Newman, Rev. T. B. Phillips, A. Roger, J. ## Cable News.

Special to Evening Telegram
LONDON, Sept. 1.
German resentment of the part that England, rightly or wrongly, is supposed to be playing is growing up, and the persistent enmity of Britain towards Germany is the keynote of many newspaper articles.
The Vostochek Zeitung, after declaring there is no virtue in concealing the fact that Germany is now full of bitter Anglophobia, asserts that England cannot wonder at the state of af-airs, in face of such visits as General Sir John French and other British officers are now paying to the French fortress on the German frontier. Such a tour of inspection at the present critical juncture, the paper says, can hardly be looked upon either as unintentional or innocent, especially in view of the fact that General French was once named as the Commander in Chief of the allied Anglo-French armies which are to operate against Germany.
There is a disposition here to consider the German attacks upon England as a red herring drawn across the trail. The octopus, when assailed, hides itself by discharging an ink cloud, says the Daily Mail. Germany has adopted this ruse, and in reopening negotiations with France, has made it the occasion of another outburst against Britain. The assaults may be a good omen. If they are contrived to cover a retreat, they do not resent the part they play in the conflict. It is clear and void of offence, for we know, and German statesmen know, that Premier Assoluth spoke the whole truth when he said that any statement that we have interpreted to prejudice negotiations between France and Germany are such obscure inventions without the faintest foundation in fact.
An inspired statement by the Lok-Anzerger, that the acquisition of territory in Morocco was never contemplated by Germany, is one of the most hopeful signs of the situation. The Berlin correspondent of the Standard refers to it as a plain indication that the Kaiser's Government is preparing the way for, at any rate, a partial retreat.

Special to Evening Telegram
RANS, Sept. 1.
The real difficulty in the way of early settlement, it is said at the Foreign Office, lies in the several commercial and military guarantees which Germany may claim in Morocco, as nothing can be given Germany in Morocco which Great Britain does not possess equally. Anything like privileges would afford endless occasions for the re-opening of the controversy, on questions of interpretation.
