Badly Dressed Queen.

It has been often asserted by those who know that secretly one Royal lady in Europe is really well dressed, dresses too old for their years, and some of the older carry themselves in a fashion that is too young.
The Empress of Germany is the best-dressed woman of a European throne. She does not buy her dresses in Paris, but in Berlin, London, and Vienna. Counting every item, the Kaiserin spends about £2,000 a year on dress. The Queen of Holland is said to be the worst-dressed. Sovereign. In spite of this, she manages to spend about twice as much on her clothes as does Queen Mary. The former spends about £4,000 a year, whilst the latter spends, on an average, about £2,000.
Queen Wilhelmina is accused of showing very bad taste in the choice of her frocks and hats. However, she has some excuse, for in loyalty to her own country she only employs Dutch dressmakers, and who ever heard of a noted Dutch modiste?
The costumes and hats of Queen Helena of Italy cost her nearly £3,000 a year; yet she dresses very quietly, and is seldom really in the fashion.

Helping Him Out.

Conversation hung fire badly. There were several matters which the young man wished to discuss—one in particular; but somehow he could not muster the necessary courage, and the silence became really painful.
"I was speaking with your father last night," he said at last, somewhat hesitantly.
"Oh, were you?" answered the sweet young thing, lowering her eyes. "Er—what were you—er—talking about?"
"About the likelihood of war in Mexico," the young man said, and there was fighting he hoped it would soon be over."
The sweet young thing smiled.
"Yes," she remarked, "I know he's very much opposed to long engagements!"

Girl Battled With a Thief

New York, December 9.—Returning from 9 o'clock Mass Sunday morning thirteen-year-old Sadie Flynn found a man leaving her house at No. 410 Wythe avenue, Williamsburg. He was a stocky, middle-aged, fair-complected man, about forty-five years old, and carried a pack over his shoulder.
"What are you doing here," demanded Sadie, confronting the stranger.
She was not alarmed, though all her family were away, having gone to a later Mass.

"None of your business," growled the man, and sought to push by her.
"It's a lot of my business," retorted the girl, and stretched her arm across the narrow hall. The man reached at her. She grappled with him. He tripped and fell and the two rolled down the stairs to the third floor hall.
Neither was hurt, and the man scrambled to his feet, dropping his pack. But the girl clung to him. He dragged her down to the second floor.
Then, with an oath he slapped her across the side of the head, knocked her against the wall and bounded down the remaining flights of stairs to the street and got away.
The burglar had taken $15, all the money in the house, saved to pay the rent, due this morning.

The Way He Pronounced It.

One of Sir John's favourite stories is about a group of Scottish lawyers who were gathered round a brew of "toddy" one evening.
The conversation turned upon a question of pronunciation.
"Now, I always say neether," one of the lawyers said in discussing the pronunciation of the word "neither."
"I say neither," remarked another lawyer. Turning to a third, he asked: "What do you say, Sandy?" Sandy, whose head was a little muddled by too many helpings of "toddy," woke up from a gentle doze. "Er," he said, "Oh, I say whusky!"

Raise $15,000 to Buy Browning Love Letters.

London, December 8.—Browning lovers have succeeded in raising $15, 000 towards the purchase of the Browning love letters, which it is hoped will be acquired for the Nation.
There was a great outcry last May when the letters were sold at public auction and fell into the hands of a London dealer for about £32,000. He was finally moved to propose selling them to a public institution at a ten per cent. advance of the price he paid.
It is an attempt to get the sum which has brought thus far the subscription of about half of the needed fund. The case recalls the recent outcry of the sale of Burns manuscripts, which are now being returned to Scotland as a gift from the purchaser.
