Buried Treasure at Torbay.

For centuries past the reports of buried treasure crop up, and in one instance at least in years gone by, we know that the report was correct and the enterprising seekers were rewarded for their labors, without being disturbed by the mythical "nigger" with his shovel and sulphur being emitted from his mouth and nostrils. The latest occurred yesterday, when an energetic and firm believer in the buried treasure arrived by train, fully provided with plans and bearings of the exact spot in which the treasure was deposited and covered up in the long, long ago.
The particulars are as follows:

Twenty-seven years ago a man who is now a resident of Torbay was one of a party of Newfoundlanders on board a steamer at Montreal. An old man of about 75 years of age, bearing the name of a place called "Thorn Bay" They replied that they knew no such place, but that some of the party belonged to a place called Torbay. The old man gave them a graphic description of the place he called Thorn Bay, which they quickly recognized as their own native village. He then commenced to give them the history of buried treasure in Torbay, providing one of the men with plans of the location in which the treasure was placed. He explained that exactly twenty years from the date he was speaking to them two men would arrive at Torbay seeking information about the treasure, and that one of the two could be identified by two birth marks on his right arm, and that if the men seeking information did not speak the truth in answer to the questions put to them by the Torbay men whom they would interview, the buried treasure would not be found.

Exactly twenty years after the occasion in Montreal, two men came to Torbay, and asked one of the residents if he had heard of any treasure having been buried in the settlement.
He replied that he had heard stories of such things, but did not believe that much reliability could be placed in such sensational reports. The two men from Montreal reminded him of the conversation that had taken place on board the steamer years previously. The Torbay men then asked them if they had anything by which he could identify them as having been sent to seek the supposed treasure. They replied they had not, consequently the Torbay men refused to go with them in their search.
After considerable time the Torbay men told them that one of the two men who was to find the treasure had been identified by two birth marks on his right arm. One of the Montreal men seeing that the Torbay men insisted upon seeing these marks before proceeding with them turned up his right sleeve and showed him the two birth marks. The Torbay men were satisfied with the identification, but informed the Montrealer that it was useless for them to seek this treasure, owing to the fact that they had not spoken the truth to him at the beginning. Search was made, however, but nothing resulted.

According to tradition after this failure it would be exactly seven years from that date before any discovery of the treasure would be made. This seven year period expired yesterday, Sept. 3rd, and as we mentioned above the searcher after the treasure has gone to Torbay fully prepared to capture the hidden wealth. He is quite confident that the treasure is there, and we shall await the result with much interest.
We make no comments, having given the story exactly as it was told by the party who is making the search, fortified by all the necessary marks and references to the exact spot wherein the treasure lies. The Telegram trusts that no wandering ghost or uncanny sound will disturb the seeker in his endeavors to enrich himself and live happy ever after.

At the Majestic.

Patrons at the Majestic Theatre this evening are assured of a really good show, when three big features, "The Racing Strain," a Goldwyn production, a Ford Educational film, "The Milky Way," and a rather unusual picture by James M. Flagg, the celebrated American cartoonist, entitled, "The Spoiled Girl." All three are excellently produced, and are sure to draw the unstinted praise of the entire house to-night, when they will be screened for the last time. Mae Marsh has a host of enthusiastic admirers, and when it is stated that she is starred, they will no doubt flock to the Majestic to see her in her latest production. The music by the orchestra—the peer of all Newfoundland orchestras—will be exceptionally good, with Prof. King, David Swedin and Joe Ross.
