Kearney, the plaintiff, was put in the box and subjected to a severe cross-examination by Mr. Meredith, but his evidence was unshaken. Sharkey was acquitted on the first charge, but on that of assault and wounding it was proved that he was the agressive party, and the Magistrate fined him $5.

—Bailiff English made a call at the jail to-day and took a number of prisoners to the Central Prison, Toronto. Among them were: James Murphy, who has a year to spend for stealing an overcoart; James Dawson, the "D" Company, I.S.C., deserter, who stole from Left-Handed Charley's assistant and has a six months' sontence to serve; Fred Stephens and Stephen Smith, who have four and three months respectively to serve for their recent Glencoe robtbery.

was held in their room, Wesley Hall, ias evening. The main feature of the programme was a historical review of the English, Danish and Norman periods. The paper read and talks prepared were bright, interesting and replete with information, provoking much animated discussion among the members. An introductory to the study of astronomy was then presented which dealt mainly with the proofs establishing the nebular hypothesis. The officers for the ensuing year are: President, G. H. Cowan, B. A.; vice-president, J. C. Elliott: secretary, Miss Kirkpatrick; treasurer, Miss Loughrey.

Killed by Apaches.

Mr. Frank H. Suffel, a Los Angeles, Cal., attorney, writes a long letter to the Canadian newspapers explaining the circumstances connected with the death of Mr. Robert Hardie. The first account of the death conveyed the impression that the decased had met with his death at the hands of his brother-in-law, but this is denied by Mr. Suffel, who affirms that the killing was the work of a murderous hand of Apache Indians, The members of the band, with but a single exception, writes the attorney, have been captured and the watch and chain of the murdered man was on one of their persons. The report that Hardie was wealthy was a myth and was as misleading as the statement that he was a young man From the Reliance Company.

The following letter has been received by Mayor Taylor, and will be read with nterest by all who have followed the action of the City Council with regard to the electric light contract: Mr. Geo. Taylor. Mayor, London. Ont.

Ectners

Castoria is recommended by physicians for children teething. It is a purely vegs table preparation; its ingredients are published around each bottle. It is pleasant to the taste and absolutely harmless. It relieves constipation, regulates the howels, quiets pain, cures diarrhea and wind colle, allays feverishness, destroys worms and prevents convulsions, soothes the child and gives it refreshing and natural sleep. Castoria is the children spanacea—the mother's friend. 25 doses, 35 cents.

Can a man who calls his son William be arrested for bill-raising?

The great lung healer is found in excellent medicine sold as Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It soothes and diminishes the sensibility of the membrane of the cellent medicine sold as Dickle santi-Con-sumptive Syrup. It soothes and diminishes the sensibility of the membrane of the throat and air passages and is a sovereign remedy for all coughs, colds, hearseness, pain or soreness in the chest, bronchitis, etc. It has cured many when supposed to be far advanced in consumption.

The Stock Increasing, Yet the Gems Are Much Higher in Price. Much Higher in Price.

The world's stock of diamonds has increased enormously in the last fifteen years. In 1876 the output of the African mines was about 1,500,000 karats; last year it was over 4,000,000, and the great trust which controls all the principal mines asserts that it has 16,000,000 karats in sight at the present time. Meantime the demand for diamonds has greatly increased, and they are higher to-day—partly because of the trust, but also because of the increased demand—than they were a year ago.

are ingner to-day—party because of the increased demand—than they were a year ago.

In one respect the diamond industry is different from almost all others. Its product—that is, of gems—is never consumed. Of gold and silver a much larger amount than most people believe is literally consumed in the arts past recovery, but a diamond once cut goes into the world's great stock and is liable to come upon the market at any time. Hence the world's annual taking of diamonds, which appears to be steadily increasing, even at advancing prices, is an index of how much of its surplus earnings it can afford to expend yearly in this particular form of luxury.

The romance of diamond mining is all gone. It is now a matter of excavating vast beds of blue clay by machinery, washing it, and sifting out the diamonds, which, after being roughly sorted for size, are sold in bulk by weight. The men who do the actual work are mere laborers and their pay is small.

"Here it is, madam," he replied, politely anding her a pamphlet containing the

Miss Aldelyffe turned the leaves until she ame to the letter M. The name she hoped of find was there, with the address append-, as was the case with all the rest. The address was at some chambers in a street not far from Charing Cross. "Chambers," as a residence, had always been as sumed by the lady to imply the condition of a bachelor. She murmured two words, "still there."

of a bachelor. She murnured two words, "still there."

Another request had yet to be made, but it was of a more noticeable kind than the first, and might compromise the secrecy with which she wished to act throughout this episede. Her object was to get one of the envelopes lying on the secretary's table, stamped with the die of the society; and in order to get it she was about to ask if she might write a note.

But the secretary's back chanced to be turned and he now went towards one of the men at the other end of the room, who had called him to ask some question relating to an etching on the wall. Quick as thought, Miss Aldelyfic, stood before the table, slipped her hand behind her, took one of the envelopes and put it in her pocket.

She sauntered round the room for two or. She sauntered round the room for two or three minutes longer, then withdrew and returned to her hotel.

returned to her hotel.
Here she cut the Knapwater advertisement from the paper, put it into the envelope she had stolen, embossed with the society's stamp, and directed it in a round clerkly hand to the address she had seen in the list of members' names submitted to her:

ÆNEAS MANSTON, Esq., Wykeham Chambers, Spring Gardens. This ended her first day's work in Lon

The two Cythereas continued at the Vestminister Hotel, Miss Aldelysse inform-Westminister Rotel, Miss Aldelyffe informing her companion that business would detain them in London another week. The days passed as slowly and quietly as days can pass in a city at that time of the year, the shuttered windows about the squares and terraces confronting their eyes like the white and sightless orbs of blind men. On Thursday Mr. Nyttleton called bringing the whole number of replies to the advertisement. Cytherea was present at the interview, by Miss Aldelyffe's request—either from whim or design.

"Now-then, Mr. Nyttleton, will you make a selection, and I will add one or two," Miss Aldelysse said.

Mr. Nyttleton scanned the whole heap of letters, testimonials and references, sorting them into two heaps. Manston's missive, after a mere glance, was thrown in amongst the summarily rejected ones.

Miss Aldeysse read, or pretended to read after the lawyer. When he had sinished, five lay in the group he had selected. "Would you like to add to the number?" he said, turning to the lady.

"No," she said, carelessly. Well, two or three additional ones rather took my fancy," she added, searching for some in the larger collection.

river additional ones rather took my fancy," she added, searching for some in the larger collection.

She deew out three. One was Manston's. "These eight, then shall be communicated with," said the lawyer, taking up the eight letters and placing them by themselves.

They stood up "If I myself, Miss Alderlyffe, were only construct personally," he said in a off-hand wey, and holding up a letter singly, "I should choose this man unhesttatingly, "He writes honestly, is not afraid to name what he does not consider himself well-acquainted with—a rare thing to find in answers to advertisements; he is well-recommended, and possesses some qualities rarely found in combination. Oddly enough he is not really a steward. He was bred a farmer, studied building affairs, served on an estate for some time, then went with an architect, and is now qualified as architect, estate agent and surveyor. That man is sure to have a fine

"And I think," she said, "I should choose this one as a matter of mere personal whim, which, of course, can't be given way to when practical questions have to be considered."

Cytherea after looking out of the window and then the newspapers, had become interested in the proceedings between the clever Miss Addelyffe and the keen old law yer, which rominded her of a game at cards
