well afford it; and if you will give her a home, this had better be invested for her, Bettina."

"Of course, But what's £300 for five years? You might make better terms with Mark Cray than that."

"Mark has promised faithfully to do it. I have been talking with him this afternoon about that and other things. I asked him what sum he would feel inclined to pay to Sara out of the business, and for what term. He said he thought he could give £300 a year, and continue it for five years."

"Considering all things, it is not a very generous offer," persisted Miss Bettina. "Had your life been spared, Mark could not have expected to step into the whole of the practice these twenty years."

"It is very fair, I think, Bettina. Mark ust acquire experience, remember, must rik his way up to the public confince, before people trust him as they are trusted me. He will not have his rooms filled daily with patients at a guines a head. This has come upon me suddenly, or all things might have been managed differently. I think it would be a good plan for Mark to leave the abbey for this house; I have told him so; but he will be the best judge of that."

Miss Bettina quitted her stooping posture by the doctor and sat down, revolving all that had been said. She sat slowly rubbing her hands the one over the other, as was her habit when anything troubled her.

"I cannot realize it," she said, in a half whisper. "I cannot realize it. Surely you are not going from us!"
"I'm going to those who have preceded me, Bettina," he answered. "My wife, and Richard, and others, who have gone on before, are waiting for me, and I in my turn shall wait for you. This fretting life is over. How poor!" he added more emphatically, as he clasped his hands "do even its best interests now seem beside eternity!"

Shakespeare didn't say that, but very likely he would have said something similar if he were living in this nineteenth century when so many suffer untold agonies from indigestion. Of course, he agonies from indigestion. Of course, he would have gone on to say that a man must be a fool not to take the "something" which would put an end to the "pang and torments" spoken of if he could get it. Now, it is a fact that weakened, impoverished blood brings on indigestion, which is the cause of dyspepsia, constipation—a poisond condition of the whole system—and it a fact, also, that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will so purify the blood and enrich it all the weakened organs are revitalized and strengthened. It is guarantee to do this. If it doesn't, your money will be returned to you.

The Tavistock Dairy School is a Good Place at Which to Learn.

The dairy school at Tavistock was visited last week by Mr. J. W. Wheaton, secretary of the Western Ontario Dairymen's Association, who reports the work there as progressing very favorably. The association operates the school so that a place may be provided where cheesemakers who get into difficulties in making may get help, and also where makers who wish to acquire the best practices in making first-class cheese may get practical and definite knowledge in this regard.

Mr. A. T. Bell, who was instructor in cheese-making at the dairy school in connection with Ontario Agricultural College last winter, is in charge of the work at Tavistock. His capabilities as a first-class maker and advanced dairyman are well known to all the cheesemakers in Western Outario. There has been a fair attendance so far this season, but it is heped that more makers will avail themselves of this means provided for their benefit, and cudeavor to spend a day or two with Mr. Ball during the season.

It is not always wise to defer the acquired, and a number of culled cheese are found on the curing-room shelves. It is much better to acquire the knowledge cent graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College, are in attendance at the school for the purpose of acquiring a practical knowledge of the cheese-making system. It speaks well for the future of the cheese industry that young men who have spent several years in making themselves proficient in the latest theories and practices of scientific agriculture do not consider their knowledge complete till they have made themselves thoroughly familiar with the W. O. D. A. system of cheese-making. The milk at the Tavietock factory is paid for according to the percentage of butter, fat, and is giving good satisfaction to those supplying it.

Mr. Wheaten has also visited a number of the factories in Western Ontario this season where this system is in vogue, and reports the patrons and factorymen as being fairly well satisfied with it. There are a few who are dissatisfied with it, that this dissatisfaction is usually found with the man supplying poor milk. He naturally prefers to have his 3 per cent, milk pooled with his neighbor's 4 per cent, milk, and thereby reap more than he has sown in getting a share of the profits that belong to his neighbor.
