It is then shown by Sir Sandford Fleming that in a period of from half an hour to an hour a day, the suggested Canadian-Australian free telegraphic service could be carried on over the service could be carried call Canadian-Australian free telegraphic service could be carried on over the Pacific cable, which has at present only about a tenth of the day occupied by the paying business, which goes over the line.

The free service would, therefore, not detract from the present earning capacity of the Pacific cable, nor would it add anything worth mentioning to working expenses as the cable staff is the best way out of the difficulty for working expenses as the cable staff is more who ventured to affirm the contrary, will be to say that she really directly and indirectly stimulating trade and general intercourse, such a press service would probably add very considerably, in due course, to the general earning capacity of the cable.

These facts have already been recognized by the Dominion Government, which passed an Order-in-Council on the subject in March 7th last, and invited Australian and New Zealand cooperation in the proposal for a free press cable service. This would be better than the present conditions, when many can be the present absence of regular press communication between Canada and any part of the Antipodes.

Sir Sandford Fleming does not, however, state in his letter whether or not Australia, as a co-partner in the Pacific cable, would assent to the suggested Canadian and New Zealand free press it to be trouble in store for him should he he has reason to believe that the Australian Commonwealth might waive objections to the modified proposal, which should in due course make easier the larger proposal of a Canadian-Australian service.

demands for school accommodation in newly developing districts. It is consequently practically impossible, under present conditions, to keep its expenditure stationary without neglect to meet the educational requirements of more or less important districts. Hence the best that can be done is to administer the department carefully and avoid waste and extravagance, though a somewhat considerable increase of aggregate expenditure cannot be avoided, for there are many new and growing districts in widely parted regions of the province urgently demanding further school provision.

Thus to quote but one instance in point, Southeast Kootenay, is in particular, as Inspector Wilson has descovered, likely to justify a number of new educational demands, due to the rapid growth in that section of lumbering and coal and lode mining. Cranbrook and Fernie both call for additions to their schools, and Coal Creek, Marys-igle and other places—at present until the columns the columns that it is fantastic enough to have the object much in the latest theory. Sir,-We are most interested I am sure, in the articles in the Semi-Weekly Colonist for December 1st, by W. John Foster Fraser, entitled, "Why the American Youth these when opportunity occurs. I do not think that an intense keenness in games will keep back a nation in trade or prosperity. It was not so with the Olympian games and the ancient Greeks.

Then Mr. Fraser goes on to give remarks not in praise of Oxford and Cambridge. These universities were never intended to give their students a business training. They were established for the advancement of learning for the sake of learning, not as a means of obtaining Grape fruit, each Sea sealing convention, which is an expected event of the early future.
