THE LAKE REGION OF B. C.

We are told that the cattle range is giving place to the fruit farm, and the cayuse is being replaced by the well-bred horse, which will find a market anywhere. This is good sign. A cattle range is a case of land being put to a maximum of use. A fruit farm is a minimum of land being put to a maximum of use. Cattle ranges means sparse population. Fruit-farming means thickly populated communities. The business centre of a cattle range country can never be much more than a village. The business centre of a fruit-growing region may easily be a city. The country around Kamloops upon the splendid future that is opening before it.

We have a special display of dining-room furniture on our third floor—five suites grouped there for your easy and convenient inspection. While this grouping doesn't do justice to the splendid pieces shown, it will give you a fair idea of the possibilities of these suites when properly installed in a home, with furnishings to harmonize.

We show two suites in mahogany, two in Mission oak and one in "dull" golden oak. There is smartness and newness in every piece, and they are worthy of inspection by every homekeeper. Drop in some of these days.

In the Home—Especially if It Is a "Burrowes" Featherweight,
The Card Table That Is Fit for Any Company

Haven't you ever wished for a small table you could use for "cards"—a table that you could store away after the game? Most homes could find use for one of these splendid "Burrows" featherweight, folding card tables.

These tables are built in a strong, substantial way and are finished in best manner. They are "fit" for any home and any company. When not in use they fold very compactly and can be stored in very small space. This folding operation—either opening or closing—is simply and easily done. Each table is packed in a separate carton.

Proposal to Prevent Inspectors Being Summoned in Civil Action Criticised—Third Class Certificates

The presence upon the floor of the House Monday of a large deputy representative of organized labor, who had introduced a more than casual debating of matters especially touching the interests of workers, which very conveniently brought the consideration in committee of amendments to the Factories Act, and the Government inspection bill to be removed hereafter, in itself was an expert witness in itself. Mr. Hawthorthwaite, in the House, had suggested exemption, and incidentally left the way open for the Attorney General to effectively answer with several other bills, which were exactly welcome to the Socialist League. It was in the debating of the exemption bill that the Government bill that the first session of the House in the week gained its principal interest.

At the committee hearing, the bill was provided for Medical Inspections of the Public Schools, the father of the bill (Hon. Dr. Young) met very early in the point that had been taken by the committee, and the advisability of any save qualified medical practitioners being in any event permitted to conduct inspections of pupils in respect to health or physical condition. The minister had already explained at some length the intention of the section providing inspections by any others than medical men was designed solely to cover such cases as might be made by sanitary officers, and the committee's improvement of sanitary conditions and this was made more plain before the bill was finally reported to the House, complete with minor amendments.

During the half-hour which the House spent in committee on the House Education bill (a program report) being amended, the following report, after amendments were presented, was ultimately reported by Mr. Hawthorth, under the term "superfluous." The committee had "smacked" the bill, calling it "superfluous" and "patricianism;" while Hon. Dr. O'Connell defended the term employed. He held that the bill contemplated calling the special schools "superfluous," and he found that a more distinctive name was needed. As the municipal parliament were these schools would not develop into high schools. The matter was finally left in abeyance. Mr. Hawthorth, in the meantime, had been thrown into doubt as to whether the provision to establish school libraries was sufficient to cover the purpose of the bill. He was informed from the minister as to the scope and purpose of such libraries as schools, and he was then able to amend the bill eventually "standing over."

The principal debate arose, however, over the question of how the government would make third class teacher certificates available for life upon the holder's successful completion of the pedagogic success by attendance at a Normal for thirteen months in all. The opposition members contended that the action would place a premium upon teachers who were not in agreement with the lower grade certificate, and that if the rural schools would suffer, while the urban centers would benefit. The majority made it clear that the requirement was not for a preliminary Normal school training, and that the holder subsequently would rather be a teacher in a lower grade than a principal in a higher grade certificate, meaning that the holder would be in a position to advance and consequently higher wages would be paid. The worst it meant an improvement of the functional standard of the lowest grade certificate, and an all advantage with the innovation.

Mr. Jardine favored the making valid of the class certification. He said that the class certification was a device which the holder of a certificate could use in eight or ten years, without requiring such a certificate holder to have had any experience as a teacher to take the Normal School examination. He said that he was of the opinion that the class championed by the member for Esquimaux was actually a class of persons who were not as well as supposed to qualify for more than a year, although it might for reason be that the holder of a certificate might be a holder was obliged to qualify as a second-class certificate teacher. In answer to the question of Mr. Hawthorn as to whether or not the class certification would entitle a teacher to a certificate independent of the Normal School examination, he said that he was not, giving as his reason that this kind of education might not especially be of value to the holder of a certificate as in the teaching profession. He said that the object of the legislation was primarily to give a certificate to the holder of the teaching profession, which it was aimed to make as attractive as possible, and that the holder of a certificate should be competent.

While grudgingly admitting that the intentions of the minister might be admirable, Mr. Hawthornthwaite maintained that the establishment of third-grade life certificates would work out advantageously to teachers holding second or first class certificates, and who had gone to much trouble to secure such standard. This was contradicted by Hon. Dr. Young, who explained how the classes could not be brought into competition as suggested.

To Overcome Difficulties.

Premier McBride said that the government would certainly welcome an amendment making it possible to secure for the rural schools the special advantages as to teaching efficiency enjoyed by the city schools. It was to overcome difficulties innumerable in securing better teachers for the rural schools that this portion of the bill was designed, while nothing in the
