

THE EVENING MEETING.

College Street church had the honor of being selected for the evening meeting, and the presence of the pastor, Rev. Alex. Gilray, made all Knox College students feel at home. Dr. Caven presided. Dr. MacLaren, in the name of the Faculty, addressed to the graduating class words of farewell, encouragement, warning. W. A. J. Martin performed the duties of valedictorian for the class of '89. Rev. D. J. Macdonnell gave, as he usually does, a stirring address to the graduates, students, ministers and whoever else came within range of his speech. One good point he made, one worth making again, was in urging ministers to preach only what they believe, not what they doubt. Doubt is paralyzing. Only those who believe because they have seen, and speak because they believe, are powerful preachers. One of the dangers threatening the pulpit is acceptance of truth at second-hand. There is power in the sublime egotism which says "I know."
