and the magnificent edifice that has grown up from tinction should amuse himself in taking away from under it the foundations of that noble edifice of St. Peter at Rome, which is the wonder and admiration of all beholders? What would you say, if he exercised that dreadful power in taking away the foundations of a mighty city? What would you say if he exercised it in removing the foundations of the whole world? in sapping the foundations of the crust of the earth? Would you not look upon him as a demon? as a horrid monster? as the most accursed of beings? And yet, Christian soul! behold the liar! He destroys truth the foundation of the whole human edifice of society. Not only does he render it a heap of rains-not only does he overturn all human confidence, all public trust, all union between man and man; not only does he render social intercourse a babel of confusion and a den of thieves; he actually saps the foundations themselves by taking away truth that foundation on which all their foundations rest. If then the miscreant who saps material foundations is to be hated and dreaded on account of the injury and damage he does; much more so must the liar who by every lie saps the foundation truth, be execrated and contemned. It is related that a certain man once destroyed a certain beautiful temple in the hope of having his name handed down to posterity; but that, such was the universal execration of his crime, by universal consent his name was thenceforth never mentioned. The name of the temple is preserved in history but the name of the miscreant who destroyed it has been utterly unknown to all succeeding ages. Would to God, that the liar-the destroyer of God's holy temple Truth-were treated with a like contempt.

IRISH HOME RULE MEETING.

The monthly meeting of the Mentreal Branch of the Irish Home Rule League was held on Tuesday ovening, the, 6th inst, in the Hall of the St. Patrick's Society, Corner of Craig and St. Alexander Streets. The President Edward Murphy Esq., in the chair; there was a very large attendance of members present.

The President in opening the meeting, referred at some length, and in very feeling terms, to the great loss the Irish Home Rule Cause had sustained in the death of Mr. Martin, the Secretary of the Parent Association. They could hardly over estimate their loss which was a national one. He read a private letter of the deceased gentleman's to him received a few days ago, dated from the House of Commons London, 19th March, written just ten days before his (Mr. Martin's) death, which exhibited in a very marked degree his goodness of heart, firm patriotism and christian feeling. He referred to Mr. Martin's speech delivered in the House of Commons, not long before his death, when he movd for the production of "the papers" regarding Mr. Mitchel's "trial" and "conviction" in 1848. Mr. Martin was listened to with marked attention. His address was a powerful and unanswerable expose of how the jury in Mr. Mitchel's case was packed, and how it was the ravages of the familie that produced the insurrection of 1848. This great speech produced a profound impression on the House, and will be long and gratefully remembered by his countrymen as one of his last and ablest efforts in favor of his poor and suffering country.

He said it would be their duty to adopt resolutions of condolence suitable to the occasion, which should be transmitted to the Parent Association by next mail. He read from the Nation the report of the meeting of the Irish Home Rule League. Dublin, at which the remittance of £50 Sterling and the address forwarded on the 19 Feb. were received, when the following resolution on motion of the Rev. J. A. Galbraith, T.C.D. and seconded Mr. J. Cantwell was warmly and unanimously adopt-

"That we unanimously accord to the Montreal Branch of the Home Rule League a special tribute of praise and thanks for their fidelity and devotion to the fortunes of their unforgotten native land, as evidenced by the generous support and cheering co-operation which they have given to the Home Rule movement, and we request Mr. John Martin, M.P., to convey to them this vote of thanks."

(Applause.) The President remarked that he had not as yet received any official notice of the reception of the ficent offering, I beg to assure you that neither the remittance referred to or of the address accompany- one, nor the other, was necessary to convince me ing it, probably the great press of business, consequent upon poor Mr. Martin's illness and death, happiest of his days with you. had caused the delay, but they doubtless would before next meeting have a communication from the Parent Association acknowledging their receipt.

Mr. Matthew Ryan followed in an eloquent ad dress. He read extracts from published letters of the late Mr. Martin proving him to have been a thorough Christian patriot and gentleman, that he Mr Martin fully and heartly sympathized with the vast majority of the Irish people (though differing from them in religious belief) in the many day that I came, in what manner I have been with grievances under which they are still suffering. He said it was our duty as Home Rulers and the duty of Irishmen, no matter where they may be, to loose no time in testifying their due regret at the death of such a true and patriotic Irishman as the late John Martin was. He therefore moved the following resolutions :--

"Whereas, intelligence has recently crossed the Atlantic of the death of John Martin, Esq., member of the Imperial Parliament for the County of Meath, Ireland; and whereas, there is cause in said event ot deep regret and sorrow of heart for the Irish family at large-alike to that portion which still clings to home, as to that greater number, spread over nearly all parts of the civilized world: Bo it resolved that this meeting, as representing the Montreal Branch of the Irish Home Rule League, declares that it participates profoundly in this widespread grief, and regards the death of Mr. Martin, at this most important juncture in the political affairs of Ireland, as a great national loss." Mr. Ryan concluded by further enlogizing Mr. Martin for the charity which he showed towards all parties. (Loud Applause)

Mr. J. Hatchette, in seconding the resolution, said he felt very great regret, indeed, at the death of Mr. Martin. They had lost, in his belief, the father of the institution, He (Mr. Hatchette) looked upon him as a man of the purest intentions, who struck out nobly and kindly for the welfare of his country. He had a melancholy pleasure in seconding the resolution. (Applause.) The resolution was carried unanimously.

Mr. J. J. Curran, in an cloquent speech proposed, "That a copy of the resolution just passed be transmitted to the President of the Irish Home Rule League, with a respectful request that it be by him communicated to the members of the family of the lamented deceased." He said he did not think on an occasion like this it would be proper to dilate at any greater length on the less that had befallen the League through the death of Mr. Martin. The solemn silence in which the reremarks of the President, as well as those of the the meeting tell the death of their

On motion of Professor McKny and seconded by Mr. F. Callahan, it was agreed that this resolution be forwarded to the family of the late Mr. Mitchel.

The President announced that the annual meeting, for the election for office bearers would take place next month. After the transaction of some routine business the meeting adjourned.

ADDRESS TO THE REV. I. J. Mac-CARTHY, WILLIAMSTOWN.

On Father McCarthy's removal from Williamstown to Brockville, the following address was presented by his late parishioners :-

REVEREND AND RESPECTED SIR, -It is impossible to describe, or even attempt to give utterance to the great sorrow and deep regret that more than overburdens the hearts of us, your parishioners, by your departure from our midst. Links of spiritual love and Christian friendship have formed a chain—that we feel—as if naught should sever.

Sixteen years—yet it seems but a momentary dream-you, beloved Pastor, have graced the Sanctuary of St. Mary's Church, Williamstown, offering the Adorable Sacrifice, praying for our salvation, exhorting us to virtue and urging us onward in the path of right.

Through your generous and untiring zeal has our little "Temple of God" acquired its present devotional standing; our Convent, to you alone we owe its thriving condition; our Missions were established by your heroic self-sacrifice; our Mid-night Mass heralding the Divine Infant's Birth; our Grand Processions edifying and orderly conduct; our "Forty Hours' Devotion" before our dear Lord in His sweet Sacrament of Love.

All, all these and innumerable other proofs of your holy and energetic ministry for our welfare claim our gratitude; and we are grateful, yes, Rev. Father, we are truly and deeply grateful for your pastoral labors, saintly example, encouraging counsels, charituble and noble works.

But, alas! since you must leave us, rest assured the people of Williamstown will treasure your memory with many a fervent, " God bless him." We entreat you, however, upon every occasion, that your new duties will allow a leave of absence (and may that be frequent) to come and gladden us by your respected presence. A hearty welcome will await you each time. Fain would we tender you, most worthy Sir, a testimonial equalling our respect and love, but such being impossible, we beg you to accept this purse not for its pure intrinsic worth, but as a symbol of our numberless good wishes.

God grant you health, peace, in fine, all manifold blessings-and should we forsooth never be permitted to have your constant spiritual guidance again in Williamstown, yet, we confidently hope that the union which has been our anchor here on earth, may be our scal in Heaven,

Your devoted and grateful children in Jesus and Mary,

THE PARISHIONERS OF WILLIAMSTOWN. Williamstown, April 6th, 1875.

REPLY.

My VERY DEAR FRIENDS,-It were not only ungenerous but uncandid did I not confess the kindly sentiments so beautifully expressed in your much-prized address, afford me most sincere pleasure and are as gratifying to me as they are honorable to the generous noble hearts that dictated

At the same time I feel your love too highly cstcems the little I have been instrumental in effecting since I came among you; and well am I aware the honorous success that has invariably crowned my every undertaking, after God, must be attributed to your zeal, your devotedness-and when I consider the many calls upon you-your more than princely generosity; while I receive with profound gratitude this expression of your filial affection and respect, accompanied by this magni-

Well nigh seventeen years have passed away since the late venerable Bishop of Kingston entrusted to me the care of this lovely parish; and during these long, long years at your hands, time and again, have I been the recipient of the most flattering proofs of the esteem in which you have ever so kindly held me. For myself I will say, never have I been indif-ferent to your interests. "You know from the first you all the time" (Acts xx., 18). The second parish priest, necessarily I found, though much was done, still very much to do. Thanks to God, and your spirit of self-saorifice, to-day St. Mary's is complete in every respect. Your Church possesses in elegant abundance everything necessary for the Divine worship.

The costly plate, rare paintings brought from Italy and France, the Sacred Vestments and Ornaments are second to none in the country.

Your Convent, under the care of the Ladies of the most distinguished of our teaching Orders, | der the studies clear and pleasing and attractive, flourishes in a manner that proves it to be particularly blessed of God.

A lovely Chapel will grace Lancaster next October; and in a few weeks the addition to the presbytery will have been finished, thus making the parochial residence all that could be wished for.

Blessed be God, all has succeeded since my advent here; and though three nationalities compose this Missien, the peace and good will that has reigned within its bosom, has become almost proverbial. Yes, truly the past has been supremely bright; God grant the future may be as cloudless. Happy in your midst, gladly would I have labored to the end for your temporal and eternal welfare. Gladly would I have slept the long sleep beneath the shadow of those beautiful altars at which, for almost half my life, I have ministered with happiness unspeakable. But God has willed otherwise-Rome-Alma-Roma-has sent, to rule over us, a man according to God's own heart; and to-day, our honored Bishop calls me to sever the bonds that have so long and so closely united us. The sacrifice is great, but it must be consummated: the chalice fills to the brim, but we may not refuse to drink it. Soon another pastor will fill my place; in him you will find the talents and the virtues wanting in me. For him I bespeak your affection and esteem; be to him what you have been to me, and I feel the Parish, far from suffering by my absence will be more prosperous than ever.

And now my dearest friends, I must say adieu, to God I confide you; He alone can guard you as: I desire o Kahall pray him to watch over you, to the compass; and especially attracts the attention and elicits the admiration of the traveller incoming by steamer or railway. The praises bestowed on its majestic appearance at a distance, are increased when its proportions and beauties are viewed in detail. Built of white brick in modern style with elaborate yet tasteful decorations of the same material, its three lofty storeys, springing from a high basement, are surmounted by a Mansard roof, from which again arises a cupola,-the gracefulness of the pile has not been sacrificed in securing the substantiality which is one of the most marked characteristics of the structure. The construction of this building has been governed by liberal and enlightened counsels; great care has been displayed in providing every requisite for the health and comfort of the inmates; and that vexed question of ventilation has been solved by simple and efficient machinery that should be respirated air is regularly drawn off and a pure studied by architects who have a thought for the lungs of those for whom they build. The build felt in the room, and there is no possibility of ing has necessarily a northern aspect; and the catching cold from an open window. The building is heated by let water conveyed in nines throwing main entrance is from Russell street. Once with- is heated by hot water, conveyed in pipes, throwing in the portals the first noteworthy object is the off the heat through an extensive "coil" in each spacious hall with its rich wainsconting in black walnut, satin-wood and bird's-eye maple. This combination is frequently used throughout the building, particularly in the door-panelling, and the effect is remarkably fine. In the newelpost of the main stair-way it affords scope for one of the most elegant and costly specimens of handiwork of the kind to be found in the country. From the newel-post winds a balustrade of black walnut, richly dight, making an elegant stair-case. In the hall is a niche for a statue yet to be placed. The hall divides the main building into two portionsthe eastern being devoted to instruction and the western is mainly reserved for the residents either the pupils or the members of the sisterhood. The first room on the right of the entrance is to be the reception room. It is now receiving the finishing touches from the painter. Immediately adjoining is the music room,—a spacious apartment with a large bay window facing the west. In it are two or three pianos, and other instruments. The wainscoating is a beautiful variety of French grey tints that have a most pleasing effect. Upstairs are the apartments of the Ladies-such as the drawing room, office of the Superior, etc., all very plainly furnished. In the third flat are the dormitories, affording accommodation for forty resident pupils. These rooms are among the most pleasant in the building, being lofty, well lighted, thoroughly ventilated, and fitted, with everything required for the comfort of the inmates. Adjoining, to the rear, is a large toilet room. A marble slab down the centre contains twenty-four basins, fitted with silver-plated taps, supplying het and cold water. At the sides of the room are four and twenty toilet stands, each containing all the requisites of the toilet; at the farther end are two large bathing apartments with hot and cold water. This brings the visitor to the upper story of the wing in the rear of the main building. Going down there is a cheerful little room at present occupied as a select day school for little boys. Down in the basement of this building is the well equipped kitchen, also carefully ventilated, and adjoining is the dining room for the resident pupils and teachers Across to the eastern section-still in the basement which is fully ten feet high and with abundance of light—is the recreation room, where the girls can have a good health giving romp--if indeed girls or young ladies in these advanced days ever do romp. A section of this room is just now occupied by a class of little girls belonging to the free Separate School. They are here simply as a matter of convenience, and still remain under Separate School management. The walls are covered with an admirable series of object lessons "published under the direction of the Committee of General Literature and Education, London, England." There are two hundred and thirteen of these object lessons; each a little larger than a half sheet of foolscap, and giving a very careful representation of some member of the animal kingdom, with a few lines of descriptive or explanatory letter press. No better method could be devised of imparting a knowledge of the important or wonderful or curious among the birds or beasts or fishes. Reaching the ground floor there are in two rooms-divided by sliding doors so that they may be thrown into when occasion requires—the two senior divisions of girls belong-ing to the Separate School. The three classes number about fifty each. Again ascending to the second storey we enter the class-rooms for the young ladies two spacious apartments furnished with all the modern and improved appliances for objective teaching-a terrestrial globe, an admirable series of astronomical charts, with charts showing climatology of the earth, mountains, animal ranges and also historical and biblical charts. In the north eastern room are Johnson's illustrated series of object lessons in natural bistory, physics, etc. The educational facilities of the institution are of the best; nothing indeed has been spared to renas indeed must be the objective method of teaching with first class apparatus, as compared with the old plan of memorizing abstract definitions. The academy is, of course, yet too young to pronounce upon the method of teaching followed, or to look for results; but from the success and experience of the Ladies in charge, there is no doubt that this will achieve a front position among the educational institutions of the country. In the decorative portions of these lotty and well lighted rooms a refined taste has produced everywhere effects not simply chaste, and pleasing; but beneficial to the health of the inmates. Great care has been taken everywhere to modify the abundant light by a proper combination of color. For instance, in a little room off a dormitory-to be used as a crayon-drawing room-the cupola, the lower and inner part of which is painted in green tints, producing a peculiarly soft and pleasing color for the art student. In the class rooms of the young ladies the wainscoting is a chaste combination of pea-green and light drab its favour. tints, which with the beautiful shades in the stained glass over the doors and in the sliding doorways, tends to diminish the strength of the light and makes it much more agreeable than if either plain white or more decided colors had been used. The same excellent principle is adhered to throughout; and wherever a pillar has been found necessary, its white surface is relieved by shades of sea-green and grey. The ordinary, windows are, filled with French doubleplate glass; and in the halls, or wherever a good effect can be produced Stained glass—blue, green, or deep red—is used, and the blue took Klisheelan, a Pomange of The result is very pleasing in the day time. pictorial illustrations. The builders set out with publisher, Barclay Street, New York, a magnifithe intention of securing perfect ventilation, and all plans were subordinated to this one idea. The wisdom of this course cannot be gainsaid by one who has breathed the close atmosphere in many plans prepared by Mr. Wm. Duffus, Architect, of a magnificent pile, or shivered in one apart-this town, under the fostering care of the Rev. Fa-ment and roasted in the next. For a large educather Stafford is a notable object from all points of tional establishment pure air and plenty of light every Irish family in the United States and Cais much more important and necessary than costly furniture. Basement to roof two large iron shafts are carried to the roof, and enclosed in a brick wall, so as to allow considerable space round the shaft. Numerous registers near the floor and near the ceiling in each room, communicate more or less directly with these shafts, a fixe being built where required for that purpose. The same principle is carried out independently in rooms but connected with the shafts, and in the wings. In the basement is simple yet powerful machinecy for controlling the air supply. Here also are two large furnaces, each consuming about sixteen tons of coal in the year. A portion of the heat from the furnace goes up the long shafts, which also encloses the smoke-pipe, and the air in the shaft being rarified, ascends, the air from the different rooms rushes in, and its place is taken by fresh air. Thus the room, surrounded by a handsome bronzed screen, with marble slab. Both in the heating and ventilating arrangements the quantity can be regulated to the nicest shade. Every room is provided with a thermometer; and the mercury is kept at 600; a temperature that, with the excellent supply of pure fresh air, is mild and agreeable. Each class room is designed to accommodate about tifty pupilsand no more—but if the rooms were pucked to "their utmost capacity," the air supply would maintain an atmosphere as pure and fresh as ever, The ventilating system of this building has been copied into the new Normal School at Ottawa.

The building complete cost about $30,000; and with outbuildings, grounds and fencing will cost about $50,000. The dimensions are :- main building, 84 feet by 50 feet; extension, 30 feet by 41 feet; laundry and store house two storeys high, 25 feet by 50 feet. The stone cutting for the building was done by Mr. John Millburn, of Lindsay; stone work and brick work by Mr. James Growden, contractor, Lindsay; plastering by Mr. Frederick Reeves, Lindsay; carpenter work under the fore-manship of Mr. Samuel Tucker, and the personal supervision of Mr. Wm. Duñas, Architect. The whole design and the completion of this architectural triumph is extremely creditable to the energy and talent of Mr. Duffus, of Lindsay. The painting by Mr. Hughes, of Jersey City, is a specimen o skill and taste surpassed by nothing in the county and is pronounced superior to the painting in Go vernment House. Toronto: the roofing, iron-work and hardware in general, was supplied by Mr Geo. H. Bertram, hardware merchant, Lindsay the heating apparatus, lavatories, apparatus for water supply, laundry, etc., by Morrison & Maguire plumbers, etc., Toronto.

RECEPTION OF FATHER O'BRIEN. Tuesday evening, April 6th, a mass meeting of Roman Catholic citizens was held in the Christian Brothers' School Hall, which was overcrowded The Very Rev. V. G. Farrelly presided, and Mr Macarow was Secretary. The object was to make preparations for the reception of Father O'Brien Bishop-elect, on his arrival in Kingston on Saturday afternoon, the 17th, prior to his consecration next day. A committee of twelve of the oldes parishioners of the city, with the Mayor as Chair man, was struck, to meet Dr. O'Brien at Gananoque and escort him to the city, also to prepare an ad dress and present it on his arrival at the Cathedral It was resolved that all the men of the congregation would meet the new Bishop at the Depot and accompany him into town. The different Catholic societies are to appear in regalia with bands of music. Meetings to prepare for this part of the reception were held by the Y.M.S.B. Association, and by St. Patrick's Society. It is expected that a grand demonstration will be made .- Kingston Whig.
