

ISLANDS

ISLANDS always seem to me
Children of the Land and Sea.

Lulled by waves that ever sing,
Dowered with youth that takes no wing.

Cradled on their mother's breast,
Children most supremely blest.