The day was fine, the track was fast and there was a good Monday crowd.

Foley was called to the stand after the sixth race and this, coupled with the fact that some books offered 9 to 5 against his mount right at the close of the betting, caused, many to think that it was on account of a bad ride when he was being cautioned for cutting across the track just af-ter the start. The ride on The Globe was no worse than any of Foley's best performances.

An even half dozen went to the post in the opening race, the Havoc Purse, for 3-year-olds and up, at 6 furlongs, and, altho the Seagram sprinter, Merry Engfand, ran somewhat disappointingly Saturday, he was a red hot favorite, the public seeing nothing but him in the race. He opened at 4-5, but the steady play Paul Clifford, third on the slates secured the closing event, Cocksure, the public choice, being an also ran.

The layers must again have beaten the players. Thirty-five were in line and little complaint could be had about the prices to win, tho on the second and third odds they get in line so rapidly that it looks as if there are many making books at the Woodbine who are only bluff bookmakers.

Torced his price down a point. Ballot Box, principally, because the good rider. Koerner, had the mount, was nibbled at to win, but strongly supported for the place at evens, which later on was cut to 4-5. The race itself was a good one from the public's standpoint. Scarfell went out in the lead from a perfect start, but soon made way for Loupania, who led until well up the stretch, where Merry England and Ballot Box got up and beat her out.
