Definition.—An Investigation was held the other day by the Directors of a school into the conduct of some of the teachers towards the scholars. Among the witnesses examined was a little fellow, about ten years of age, who was asked whether he thought his teacher was "partial?"

"No thir, he ar'nt," he answered promptly enough.

"Do you know what 'partial' means?"

"Of coath I doth," said the young rogue, quite indignant at this imputation upon his intelligence. "Well, what is it?"

"Vy, if he wops all the boys like thunder, and wops 'em all alike, I doesn't call that bein' 'partial,' doth you?"

"I rise for information," said a member of a legislative body. "I am very glad to hear it," said a bystander, "for no man needs it more."

"This is a very impartial country for justices," said Sam. "There ain't a magistrate going as don't commit himself twice as often as he does other people."
