

nection with increasing devotion to exhaustive ministerial labours, at length induced complete physical prostration; and after suffering for several weeks from nervous and typhoid fever, which he endured with his wonted resignation to the Divine will, he passed away with serenity and christian triumph to "the Paradise of God," on the 4th of November last, leaving behind his afflicted widow and two daughters to mourn their incalculable loss. His memory will be tenderly cherished by multitudes who enjoyed his ministry; for his preaching generally was richly expository, and rendered attractive by great fluency and evident spiritual fervor. Possessed of eminent wisdom as a Superintendent, indefatigable as a Pastor, full of generous sympathies, and remarkably meek and affable, he was deservedly esteemed and loved, especially by those who could appreciate such a living exemplification of the "mind which was in Christ."

3. REV. KENNITH MCKENZIE,

Received his earliest religious impressions in the Episcopalian Church. While preparing for the ministry in that branch of the Church, he was induced to attend special services conducted by the Wesleyans on the Whitby Circuit. Here he decided fully to give his heart to God, and, in answer to believing prayer, he soon received a sense of the Divine favour.

He at once united with the Methodist Church, and feeling a deep conviction that God had called him to be more extensively 'useful, he immediately began to preach to others that Gospel which he had received, and which was the source of his joy and hope.

After labouring a short time as a Local Preacher on the Whitby Circuit, he was sent to the Newburgh Circuit, where he preached with acceptability and success.

At the Conference of 1863, he was received on trial, and appointed to the Chatham Circuit. He had scarcely entered upon his new field of labour when his health began to fail, and he had to retire from the work in which his whole heart was engaged. His health continued to decline; but while his physical strength yielded to the influence of disease, his faith in the Redeemer grew stronger, and his prospects of heaven became brighter. He died in great peace on the 25th December, 1863.
