Every consumptive is a radiating centre of disease and death. Under present conditions not only is his own cure generally hopeless but with every cough that racks his wasting body he threatens the health and the life of all in his neighborhood.

The sanatorium system with its isolation and its scientific treatment of patients protects the public and at the same time offers to the consumptive the most effective remedy yet discovered by medical science. The provision of such institutions is a public and of the provision of such institutions is a public and such as a public and of the federal and New Brunswek government.
