

BEST

A LYRIC OF THE HEART.

Deep in me soul thy image, eye, shall dwell,
Linked with its life—a vivifying spell—
Part of itself, its ruling, guiding power,
Its light is joy, its hope in sorrow's hour.
Each thrill which shakes its hidden depths shall be

Known, felt, awakened, only, sweet, for thou:
For thee its glowing energies shall burn,
To thee alone its yearnings all shall turn.

Deep in my soul, yet higher than the sun,
Shall love exalt thee, best and dearest one!

One to be worshipped, fondly, fervently;—
Higher than all, yet lovely still to me.

Higher than all, princes of earth might bow
In vain to ask the love thou holdst now;

The love unthought, the love which asks to be

Only remembered kindly, sweet, by thee.

Deep in my soul, in its recesses still—
 You, but a thousand depths, those depths thou'lt fill!

Hildon and treasured, shrin'd and worshipp'd
 It is, its gen, its all, its only care!

Thy voice is music, and thy smile its light!

Thy kiss its happiness, and thy smile its light!

Thy love its inspiration. It should fly

Thine image from my soul, as—
 All must die!

"HE'S NONE THE WORSE FOR THAT."

What though the homespun out he wears—
 Beg suited to the sons of art?

What though on coarser food he feasts,
 And on a plain, rough, homely meal?

What though his coat and hat cost the soul;
 Divested to congenial chit, chit,

 Right prevail and not the wrong?

The man is none the worse for that.

What though within the humble cot,
 No costly crimson is seen;

What though the wife possesses not
 The raiment of the queenly green;

What though the poor boy loves his hand,
 Half-clad to the belt and bare;

If conscience guides the heart and hand,
 The man is none the worse for that.

True worth is not a thing of dress—
 Or splendor, wealth, or classic ire;

Would that these trappings were loved less,
 And clung to homed worth the more!

True worth is not a thing of dress—
 The tattered cloth, the crooked hat,

 Yet God and nature dry them!

The man is none the worse for that.

GRAND BILLIARD MATCH.—The great match at Billiards, between Mr. Starks, the American Master, and Mr. Stocks, the American Master, for £50 a side, was on Tuesday in the large room of the Griffin Inn, Lower Brompton. Although a few of us, who were to play the match, had been charged to arrive at the hour of 12 o'clock, the room was crowded before seven, even awaiting the arrival of a few friends. The two sides of the sport, however, all paid, and long were present. The match was 1000, and Mr. Stocks had his opponent 200 to start with. The game played was the American billiard game, and opened with a draw, and the first ball was a black. After 100, both players exchanged 100, and after some little time had elapsed, Mr. Stocks succeeded in getting 100 to his opponents 50, making his score, with the 200 given him, 400. From this point, Mr. Stocks scored very rapidly, and his opponents were beaten off from 90 to 70. At half past nine of such a score, Mr. Stocks had 731, and it was then bought out. Mr. Stocks would win easily, and the odds required by Mr. Stocks backers were £300 to one. Mr. Stocks continued to play exceedingly well from this period, and his lead increased to 1000, and he had 1000 to his opponents 500, making his score, with the 200 given him, 400.
