

der encouraging prospects. In fact, the quiet work has been in progress among our young people for several weeks, and one young man has already placed his self publicly on the side of Jesus; others are thoughtful and attentive, and were hopefully looking into the new year for the overflowing blessing. Our Young Men's meetings are very interesting to the people, and are quiet and working to secure a better attendance of the non-churchgoers, who in this village are far too numerous. The threatening illness of the pastor with the prevailing epidemic, la grippe, has interfered somewhat with the presentation of the Gospel, but I have not lost anything of the last. I rejoice to see the signs of gracious awakenings in many of our New Brunswick and Nova Scotia churches. May the good work speed to a grand victory for Christ is one of our chief prayers. I am sure that the Visitors are doubly dear to us in this hour of our sojourn, with its church needs, and helpful suggestions. When we return again, as we hope soon to do to the land of our birth—the best land and the best society shall appreciate, as never before, the efforts of our friends. I ask the prayers of all my friends among your readers that we may be successful in this our present place, land, and that in returning to our own land we may be Divinely guided to the spot where God would have us.
