CARRIED TO THE GALLOWS

Italian Murderer Executed in Montreal Yesterday — He Collapsed when the End was Near.

Montreal, May 26.—Shrieking and crying brokenly in a state of almost total collapse, Francesco Crevola, the murderer of Giuseppe Chime, this morning, paid the death penalty in the yard of the Montreal jail, while hundreds looked on from the neighboring roofs. The condemned man was half dragged and half carried to the gallows, where he stood, with his head sunk upon his breast, while the executioner, a man of the name of the condemned man, who had been carrying him, screamed for mercy broke from his lips. The guards bore him stumbling to the foot of the scaffold. He was carried to the steps and Executioner Elia quickly arranged the rope and cap while guards supported the moaning victim. He was dead eight minutes after the drop was sprung. At least a thousand people had found places in windows, on high fences, on roofs, on telegraph poles and to the most of these the whole scene was open. The grim affair assumed the proportions of a big spectacle and early in the morning crowds started to arrive until by eight o'clock there were 3,000 people in the streets outside the stone walls.

Over 100 policemen kept the crowd in motion and prevented as far as they were able, any sight of the scaffold. Long before 7 o'clock the crowd began to arrive, as though it were a festival of some description. Offers of food and drink were made to the crowd, but the residents held out against all offers, but nevertheless every window was crowded and every balcony jammed.

There were scores of women and children in windows and on roofs. Factory employees in some of the establishments nearby flocked to the windows and roofs and the crowd which was unable to see into the jailyard was kept supplied with details of the proceedings by those who had points of vantage. Most of the throng waited until long after the hanging before dispersing.

The condemned man had eaten nothing since yesterday and in the condemned cell there were little piles of unused rations. All day yesterday Crevola sobbed and wept. Waking this morning from a state of coma, he seemed to realize again to the full his situation and consumed by a sudden madness tried to batter out his brains against the wall of his cell. With difficulty the guards restrained him.

HUMAN DERELICTS

LEARN SELF-MASTERY

Success Of Experiment To Help Men Help Themselves

—Teach Self Respect.

"The Self Master Colony, Welcome!"

Set in whitewashed stones on the side of a sloping lawn between Elizabeth and Springfield, N. J., this simple sign invites one back into the fragrant woods, where thirty men, who have sounded the depths of despair, are making a heroic effort to forget the past and get a fresh grip on self-respect. Upward of a thousand derelicts have made the same battle in the last four years, the length of time this unique plan for human betterment has been in existence.

Just how many have been permanently benefited by the course is not known, because Mr. and Mrs. Andrew S. Floyd, originators of the plan and the guiding spirits of the colony, cannot be induced to tell. When the query is put to them they simply smile and say that enough men have been put back on the straight path to make the work worth while, but the friends of the colony are sure that at least two hundred of the subjects are respectable members of some community, and that the others have left the place the better for their experience and with the parting assurance that they are welcome to try again if temptation overpowers them. Kindness and unlimited confidence in human nature are the chief assets of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd in this work of reclamation. While the majority of the subjects are men who have left the bottom of the social scale after dissipation or misfortune had robbed them of home, position and friends, quite a number are women who have been driven to the colony by various circumstances. Some have sought the seclusion afforded by the shelter to curb their desire for liquor. All men are welcome. There is no admission fee and no dues. Guests who are able to help along the good work invariably do so without being asked, but they have no more advantage than the man who is unable to pay.

No Questions Asked.

Religion has no place in the scheme and each guest is allowed to follow the dictates of his conscience in this respect. No questions are asked and a new member doesn't have to give his name unless he feels like it. There are no set rules beyond the fact that each man is expected to do at least 7 hours' work every day. Mr. Floyd endeavors to give each man the work which appeals to him, some being employed in the printing shop, some in the carpenter shop and some in the rug weaving shop, which form part of the interesting plant. Those who have a liking for farm life put in their time tilling the soil. Others do the cooking, washing, ironing and general housework under the direction of Mrs. Floyd.

While very little information has reached the general public about this movement, it has long since passed the dictatorial stage, being evidenced by the willingness of a number of well known residents of New Jersey to assist in the work. Mr. Wm. A. Clark of North Plainfield, Alex. Litterer of Metuchen, Howard A. Colby of Plainfield and Charles H. Ingersoll of South Orange, comprise the trustees and advisory board, but the active management is left to Mr. and Mrs. Floyd.

Mr. Floyd is 37, a graduate of a Massachusetts college who up to four years ago practiced law. His wife is several years his junior and as interested in the work as her husband. Despite the fact that there is no compensation in it for them beyond the comfort which comes from helping others they are as cheerful a couple as one could find. In order that the public may become better acquainted with the colony, Mr. Floyd will deliver a free lecture at Carnegie Hall, taking for his subject, "My Family of Derelict Sons."

Teaches Self Reformation.

"What prompted you to abandon the law and take up this line of work?" he was asked recently.

"I found the law a pretty good proposition and I felt that I had in me to be of some slight aid to humanity," said the boss of the colony. It may sound like egotism but I found that I possessed a certain influence over drunkards. It isn't hypnotism or anything like that; just a quiet way of giving them good advice when they asked for it. I straightened out three or four young fellows who had gotten away badly, and then I decided that it might be worth while trying it on a larger scale. I discussed the matter with Mrs. Floyd and she agreed with me. I closed up my law books and here I am. I make no pretenses at reforming my men. I have given them a place where they can reform themselves if they desire to do so."

"What's the full course?"

"It varies from two weeks to six months and some of them have stayed a year. They come and go when they feel like it. There are no absolute rules. I have been turning away three or four a day and I want to be in a position to take care of all of them. It is no longer a theory, but a demonstrated success. The running expenses are met by the contributions of a few kind friends and the money that comes from the sale of articles manufactured here on the place, but we will have to have more money to accommodate all who come our way."

"Aren't you afraid to stay here with so many undesirable about?" Mrs. Floyd was asked.

"Not a bit," she replied. "Very often I am here alone, but I feel safer than I would if I were in a fashionable hotel. You've got to mix up with these poor fellows to realize that there is good in the worst of us."

"First along we used to lock things up," continued her husband, "but one day, after I had lost the key to our rooms and one of the men got into the room in a huff, I figured out that it was useless to take such precautions. Afterward he confided to me that he had been a professional burglar. I placed him in charge whenever I went to town after that, because I figured that he would help himself if he felt like it. I never missed a thing while he was here. We don't get many men who have been in prison, and we are just as well pleased."

RAIDED THE SMART SET'S DRESS MAKER

New York Customs Men Seize Valuable Gowns At Lady Duff-Gordon's Establishment For Under Valuation.

New York, N. Y., May 26.—Acting on information furnished by some mysterious person, said to be a discharged employee of Lucile, Ltd., a large dress-making concern at No. 17 West Thirty-sixth street, United States Marshal Hooker and several customs officials made a raid on the place yesterday and seized a number of gowns, chiefly imported models, which are alleged to have been brought into the country by misrepresentations as to value.

The government alleges that it did not receive the full duty which should have been paid. An examination is now being made of the custom house records of all the importations of Lucile, Merritt, as and Henry's organized two years ago to determine to what extent alleged undervaluation has been practiced.

Thomas J. Duggan, reputed manager of Lucile, Ltd., was arrested by the federal authorities and taken before United States Commissioner Shields, by whom he was released on $5,000 bail, furnished by Eugene V. Daly, Mr. Duggan's counsel. It was reported that other arrests in connection with the case would be made soon.

Lady Duff-Gordon, wife of Sir Cosmo Edmund Duff-Gordon, is named in the corporation directory for the current year as president of and a director in the corporation, although it was stated for her that under a reorganization which took place about six months ago, she ceased to be an official of the company and merely served in the capacity of a designer. The corporation directory gives the name of Abraham Merritt as secretary of the company, which is capitalized at $50,000.

Lady Duff-Gordon arrived in this country from Europe on Wednesday and went at once to the Ritz-Carlton, where she makes her home. When she was arrested yesterday regarding the raid of Mr. Duggan she expressed surprise, declaring there must be a mistake somewhere, but she would not discuss the charges of the government until she knew precisely what they were, she declared. The government officials would not even venture a guess as to how much money might be involved in the case, but it was declared it probably would reach a large sum.

Lucile (Limited) occupies a three-story brown stone residence building at No. 17 West Thirty-sixth street and does a large business in street and evening gowns among the wealthiest women of the city and the country.

Henry A. Wise, United States district attorney, received a call a few days ago from a person whose identity he would not reveal at present, because he fears the ends of justice might be defrauded thereby. Elsewhere this person is reported to be a discharged employee of the firm. To the federal district attorney statements were made which warranted an investigation. The matter was placed in the hands of John Williams, a deputy surveyor and inspector of the customs service, and as a result Mr. Williams went before United States Commissioner Shields and swore out warrants for the arrest of two persons, one of whom was Mr. Duggan. It was intimated strongly that Mr. Merritt and Lady Duff-Gordon would appear later, perhaps today, to tell their side of the story. It was declared at the district attorney's office yesterday that Lady Duff-Gordon probably had no knowledge of the alleged undervaluations.

Customers Ignorant of Raid.

There were numerous customers in the firm's place yesterday when the government officials made the raid, but it was done so quietly that no one in the building with the exception of Mr. Duggan knew what was happen-

KIRK BROWN COMPANY

PRODUCED IN GOMAR

Large Audience Saw Another Excellent Production of Standard Play, at the Opera House, Last Evening.

Ingomar the Barbarian, was produced by the Kirk Brown Company in the Opera House last evening before a large and well pleased audience. The play affords much opportunity to Mr. Brown and Miss Creighton, and they took every advantage of it. Mr. Brown in the title role gave a fine performance. He was in his stronger lines convincing and handled the lighter situations with care.

Miss Creighton as Parthenia, added to the laurels she has already won here. Mr. Taylor as the Timarch of Masalla, made a fine appearance and handled his part with a due appreciation of its possibilities. Mr. Chas. did a good piece of character work as Polydore, the grasping mercenary of Masalla, while Mr. Foy injected a deal of quiet humor into the role of Myron an armorer. Mr. Franklin as Alastor, Mr. Sargeant as Trinothos, Mr. Clayton as Amblyar, James Brown as Zecoles, Miss DeWeale as Aetia and Miss Kyles as Theano also did good work.

The scenery and costumes were entirely in keeping with the spirit of the piece. Ingomar will be repeated at a special matinee on Friday afternoon, when the management of the company has kindly agreed that 25 per cent. of the gross receipts will be donated to the funds of the Anti-tuberculosis association. At the matinee today the bill will be The Sign of the Cross, while tonight A Social Highwayman will be played.

ing. He was in the office in the basement of the building when the customs men arrived and was informed of the purpose of their visit. At the same time the warrant for his arrest was served on him.

The men went through the building from the basement to the attic, and with invoices in their possession, they examined every article minutely, completing their work in about an hour.

Mr. Duggan in the meantime had telephoned his lawyer, who met him at the Federal building when the searching party arrived there. Lady Duff-Gordon was not in the Thirty-sixth street building, and it was said by others there that she had not called since her arrival from Europe on Wednesday.

The proceedings before Commissioner Shields were brief in Mr. Duggan's case. He waived the right to having temporarily and his lawyer was accepted as bondsman, with the understanding that a new bondsman would be furnished today. The District Attorney made a strong plea for a bond of $10,000, but the Commissioner thought $5,000 would be enough for the present.

Abraham Merritt was found at the Thirty-sixth street address later. In the evening and denied that he had any connection with the new company which was organized six months ago. He had been, he said, secretary of the original company, which was dissolved. Regarding his presence in the establishment at that time, he said he was a friend of Lady Duff-Gordon and had merely dropped in to welcome her back to the United States.

Lawyer Blames Bookkeeping.

The annual volume of business done here by Lucile, Limited, is great, and branches in London and Paris are said to be equally busy. About seven or eight young women are employed in the Thirty-sixth street building as designers, models, cutters and seamstresses.

Concerning the raid by the Customs men and the arrest of Mr. Duggan, Mr. Daly, the latter's counsel, said last night:

"We think that when the ownership of the London house and the New York house are shown to be identical, the District Attorney will not look upon the undervaluation charges seriously. The discrepancies, if any, are just a matter of bookkeeping. The importations are models and we will prove the valuation placed upon them was sufficient, as these garments never bring on sale the amount it cost to produce them."
