A TAKING GIRL

She took my lips in sheltered nooks,
She took my heart a prisoner,
She took my letters meant for her;
She took my words of love and care—
She took my jewels, rich and rare;
She took my youth for quite a while,
She took my time, took my style;
She took my kisses, maid so shy—
She took, I must confess, my eye—
She took whatever I would buy,
And then she took another guy.

LIKE the frustrated bride at the village altar our boxing team has been stood up not once, not twice, but three times since the season began. The Magnificent, and McGill (twice) have been the offenders. It's no tea party getting in shape for these pugilistic encounters and the funds and energy expended on advertising deserves more than a week-kneed rejection by McGill of our humble invitation.

It is pure conjecture on our part but we view two angles of this tale:

1.—We think the Redmen snubbed the U.N.B. team because they believe our mitt-slingers were inferior to theirs. A meet was scheduled for last Saturday night but the athletic department was notified Tuesday that McGill would be unable to meet their commitments because of an approaching blizzard which would hamper their automobile operations. Despite their fears Laurentian skiers are deploring the lack of snow and the stuff those Montreal boys are shovelling ain't snow brother. Or maybe rumors have seeped through the drifts of a flyweight who has the kick of a mule in either fist and a light-heavy who felled a New Brunswick moose with one mighty wallop. Maybe "they can't take it."

2.—On the other side of the ledger the fault lies with our managerial set-up. The athletic department feels that managers should be elected the previous spring and their schedules drawn up immediately. This would leave dates open for exhibitions and the bigger-name universities could be contacted months beforehand. McGill could argue that it did not have time to make the necessary arrangements. However, with the system we advocated it is unlikely that they could give us the cold shoulder!

But need we be so concerned with our cosmopolitan cousins! There is a university four times the size of U.N.B. which could provide excellent competition in at least six sports. This seat of learning is nearer than any major Maritime college. It is only 205 miles to the University of Maine which boasts a student body of 4,000 and a competent athletic department. Their facilities include an outdoor track, an indoor track and a field house; a stadium seating 12,000; a gym twice the size of ours and coaches and assistant coaches for every major sport. Like U. N. B., a wide variety of sports are available to the athlete with the stress on football, basketball, baseball and track. These four compete in the same league as Yale, Harvard and Connecticut. With such competition and facilities their varsity squads would undoubtedly be superior to ours. However, their seconds or freshman squads would be good opponents for our corresponding teams. A name university like this would be a better drawing card than Dalhousie, Acadia or St. Thomas on our campus field.

Although U. of Maine does not have intercollegiate boxing any more, Amby Legere says they could field a creditable team from their intra-mural ranks. Using our long-range schedule system, next year's boxing team may not have to reach so far for a suitable opponent. A similar situation could exist between our cross-country, skiing, and tennis squads. Perhaps Maine would appreciate our superior competition in hockey which is in the embryo stage of development. Moreover, the international goodwill which would be fostered between the participating team members is immeasurable and invaluable.

A young minister was reading announcements at the Sunday service.

He stumbled across one of them and the following words slipped: "The little Mothers League will hold their meeting this afternoon. All those who wish to become Little Mothers please see me in the rectory."

Humour . . .

Some girls are like flowers—they grow wild in the woods.

She—Did you get home the party alright last night?

He—Well, yes. I got home alright, except when I was going up the front walk, some fool came along and stepped on my fingers.

Scotch is a beverage which makes you see double, but feel single.

"Hell, yes," said the Devil, picking up the phone.

Theta: I said some awfully foolish things to Bill last night.

Kappa: Yes?
Theta: That was one of them.

Two drunks blundered into a girls' dorm coming home one night. One lost his head and ran; the other remained calm and collected.

"Take it from me," said the old maid, "don't get married."

He: Is my face dirty, or is it my imagination?

She: Your face is clean, but I don't know about your imagination.

"Give me a dime, Daddy."

"Not today, sonny."

"If you give me a dime I'll tell you what the iceman said to mama this morning."

"Here, son, quick — what did he say?"

"He said: 'Lady, how much ice do you want this morning?'"

"Sensational! Mr. Likkitysplit! Will you say a word to your legion of admirers about your impressive victory?"

"Sure—to keep ahead of the other guy use 'Vaseline' Hair Tonic regularly. It beats Dry Scalp and keeps the hair in first place."
