400 Russian Jews for Canada.

Montreal, Feb. 23.—A novel procedure in bringing immigrants to Canada was disclosed yesterday, when it was learned that Hermann Landau, a gentleman well known in London, a connection of the Rothschild family, had sent 400 Russian Jews to Canada on the Mount Temple of the C. P. R. Atlantic Line, and that the sum of $10,000 had been placed with a Montreal gentleman to their credit, this sum to be spent in housing and necessary to be spent in housing and necessary to the contract of the contr in housing and placing them in their Canadian homes.

Liquid Metal Polish. Take eight ounces of Spanish whit-ing, which must be perfectly free from grit, and put in one quart of gasoline Shake up the whiting and gasoline thoroughly. You will notice the whiting settles immediately, leaving the liquid as clear as water. To remedy this and, further, to make it a better polishing agent, add to each quart of the mixture thirty-two drops of oleic acid—no more, no less. Shake agair, and the whiting will not settle. Apply to gold, silver, nickel, brass, glass or any kind of metallic surface with a viece of cotton fiannel, rubbing well. Polish with a piece of same cloth.— Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

Waterproofing Dress Goods One of the most important processes used for waterproofing dress materials is on the lines of the old alumina process. In this case the factor used is rosin dissolved in a large bulk of petroleum spirit. The fabrics to be proofed are passed through a bath of this solution and dried to drive off the solvent. Following this, the goods are treated by pressing with hot polished metal rollers. This last process melts the small quantity of rosin which is deposited on the cloth and leaves each single fiber with an exceedingly this

"What do you suppose Adam and Eve talked about?" inquired the girl in the Hongkong chair, with a yawn, as she settled her Burne-Jones propor tions a trifle more luxuriously in the barbaric splendor of the pillows and clasped her large, shapely hands above the shadowy darkness of her head.

"Love," replied the man, with la conic promptness. "There wasn't anything else for them to talk about, so far as I can see."

Miss Chesterton's glance slowly de tached itself from the enchanting picture of turquoise water and topaz islands afforded by the oval opening in the curtain of vines that screened the veranda and rested coolly upon him. "There was the weather," she argued sweetly; "and the birds and flowers." "You forget that Adam was a man." observed her companion, with just a perceptible stress upon the last word. A silence followed, in which the appalling beauty of a California August held them spellbound. Miss Chesterton drew a sharp breath; then she resumed the conversation ence more.

"All men don't," was her somewhat ncoherent remark.

Dinsmore had the air of a man suddenly recalled to consciousness from state of suspended animation. "Don't what?"

She flushed and looked injured. Already the unpardonable sin loomed large in the perfect beauty of their small, quiet world. "Don't forget what one's talking about," she retorted crisply.

He gave an amused laugh. "You mustn't lay it up against me," was his contrite plea. "You see, I feel like a fly caught in the amber; like-likeby Jove, it's too beautiful!" She nodded understandingly, and again a silence fell, unbroken save by s wistful bird note. Meantime, slowly and painfully, measuring every inequality with its yellow, jelly-like length, a slug crawled steadily along the garden path and up and over step after step until it gained the veranda where the two were sit-

Neither of them perceived the newcomer, though it was a fine, large specimen, fully eight inches long and as large around as one's thumb, of the sort sometimes sought for by easterners who like to carry the proof of their stories back with them. It made its way along the floor of the veranda and up one of the wicker legs of Miss Chesterton's chair as if it recognized the woman as unerringly as did the serpent of old.

A little scream broke the stillness.

A little scream broke the stillness. Coming back from a dreamy, sensuous contemplation of the passion howers that hung like jewels among the dusky rafters of the porch, Miss Chesterton's startled glauce fell upon the long, fat, glatinous small stretched out upon the arm of her chair, as if enjoying a well earned, rest after the prolonged trip from its home at the reof of the clump of calls lilles.

"Strateous" she exclaimed as Disse

"Graelous" she exclaimed as Dissimere leaned toward her questioningly. "How on earth did it get here?"
"History repeats itself," was his meaning reply as he watched the intruder, whese horns pointed upward in an aggressive fashion. "I hope you are impressed by the fact that its errand is evidently with you. You will notice that it is perfectly contented there, and by the way it opens that little circular window in the side of its head I should think it was listening for what you might have to say." for what you might have to say."

For a moment they watched the slug curiously. Then a droll thought lightened her face like a flash of sunshine.

and Dinsmore waited for an expla-"I was thinking of Eve," she said softly. "The sight of the serpent must have been as bracing as a tonic after the enervating beauty of Eden. The words in themselves were innocent enough, but the tone was thoughtful, and Dipsmore's long, searching look gave them a signifi-cance that caused her to feel conscious and then redden with annoyance because she had done so. To divine that underneath his words might lie an implication that her efforts to discourage his suit meant no more than her started cry at the appearance of the slug was womanly intuition. But to show that she had divined it was a very different matter, a break more worthy of some rustic schoolgirl than of Eloise Chesterton. He continued to gaze at her until she felt like an insect impaled upon a pin point for the benefit of an interested student. At last she could endure it no longer.

"Probably Eve screamed, too, just at first sight of the serpent!" she remarked desperately. Then, with an inward groan, she wished she had not spoken.

Dinsmore laughed out a liktly with the matter and the sufference of and then redden with annoyance be-cause she had done so. To divine that

"Incredulity!" ejaculated Dinsmore in a suppressed voice, his head thrown back upon his chair and his eyes lifted to the passion flowers.

His companion sat upright, looking at him with fiery scorn. He met her eyes brazenly. Never had he seen her appear so superbly beautiful. But he only said:

'Don't sit up like that in a Hongkong chair; it's inartistic. Moreover, it's un-gracious, and a woman should never be ungracious! "You're horrid, Ralph Dinsmore," was the only reply she vouchsafed him, but he noticed that she sank slowly back upon the cushions. One couldn't afhe noticed that she sank slowly back upon the cushions. One couldn't afford to look awkward in the eyes of any man, even a man that one fully intends to refuse.

To be firm of character does not mean to be steadily stubborn.

When a man has fame he does not really know it.

A hearty appetite does not always indicate a healthy condition. It is not the quantity of food which is eaten but the quantity which is assimilated, which determines the actual value of the food consumed. If the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition cannot convert the food into nourishment, and into blood their the food is an injury instead of a benefit. For all disorders of the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition, there is accertain remedy in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It removes chogging obstructions. It strengthens the stomach, nourishes the nerves enriches the blood and builds up the body. It is a flesh-forming, nauselemaking preparation, making firms flesh instead of flabby fat. "Goldens Medical Discovery" contains no aleashol, whiskey or intixicant of anythind, and is equally free from opium, cocaine and all narcotics.

Progress is the real cure for an over-estimate of ourselves.

A family tree doesn't always beam the fruits of a man's industry.

There are fellows who laugh and grow fat over their own jokes.

MESSRS. C. C. RICHARDS & CO. Some time ago I had a bad attack of Quinzy, which laid me up for tweeks and cost a lot of money.

Finding the lump again forming immy throat, I bathed freely, (with MINARD'S LINFMENT and saturating a cloth with the liniment left it on all night.

on all night.

Next morning the swelling was gone and I attribute the warding off of an attack of Quinzy to the free use of MINARD'S LINIMEENT.
