HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

0000000000000000000000000000000 HEADACHE.

TEADACHE IS A SYMPTOM, and not a disease. If you have a headache it is in most cases due to some bad habit. You cat too much, ache it is in most cases due to some bad habit. You cat too much, drink too much, sleep too little, strain the eyes too much, or work too continuously in bad air at some trying occupation. True there are headaches due to Bright's Disease or other organic diseases, but these are infrequent compared to those coming from causes which are remediable. Let us consider some of the common causes of headaches and see how this discomfort may be prevented.

(1) From over indulgence in beer, whiskey, or wine. The remedy is aches and see how this discomfort may be prevented.

(1) From over indulgence in beer, whiskey, or wine. The remedy is to cut them out, or so lessen the quantity to give your kidneys and skin a fair chance to eliminate the poison. If you have indulged, better get rid of the booze as quickly as possible. This may be done by a combination of two cathartic pills, a hot bath, hot cloths applied to the head, hot broth, and rest in hed. (2) From biliousness or over indulgence in food. Nothing is better than good dose of ordinary Epsom Salts and rest in a quiet, darkened room. (3) Want of outdoor exercise. The city man (or woman) at a desk in a close room or the editor at work under constant strain from 5 p.m. to 1 a.m. with hurried meals is often the subject of headaches. All these people need more outdoor air and exercise. Golf, bowling or tennis, especially golf, with one-fifth the quantity of fresh meat, potatoes, and bread and the difference in fruit, vegetables and water will do more for and bread and the difference in fruit, vegetables and water will do mote to sick people than all the headache cures in the world.

(4) Eye strain, due either to defective eyesight or to trying eye work, causes lots of headaches. Headaches of this kind usually come on in the causes lots of headaches. Headaches of this kind usually come on in the evening, (sometimes in the morning) after a trying day. They are usually in the forehead or temples. A simple way to test eye strain is for one to hang up a test-card in a well-lighted room, stand twenty feet by measure away from the card and see if you can read the line marked 20, first with each eye separately and then with both eyes, and if the letters are not clear-cut distinct, and separate one's eyesight is faulty and glasses are clear-cut, distinct, and separate one's eyesight is faulty and glasses are required. Go to a first-class oculist and get the eyes properly fitted.

(5) Fatigue headache. Some people get headache from fatigue. These headaches develop towards the close of the day. The only cure is to avoid

Over-exciting oneself.

(6) Too light a breakfast. Many people, especially women, eat nothing for breakfast but tea and toast. This is insufficient to carry one along for four or five hours. After the long fast overnight one needs a good breakfast. It ought to be one of the best meals of the day. A good breakfast is—

Oranges or Grapefruit.

Cereals, with Milk and Cream.

Eggs; soft boiled, poached, or in omelette.

Toast and Butter.

A cupful of Hot Water, flavored with Cream and Sugar.

(7) Neurasthenia headache. A headache of this character is often described as a band about the head. There may be a feeling as though the top of the head is coming off, or it may be such as to make a man feel he top of the head is coming off, or it may be such as to make a man feel he is going insane. The way to prevent a headache of this character is to improve the general physical condition by good food, outdoor life, relief from excessive nervous strain and worry—especially from worry.

(8) Migraine. Boys and girls from eight to fifteen years of age frequently have headaches of a particular character. The subjects of these headaches waken in the morning with a heavy loggy feeling. There may be a disturbance of the eyes, such as flashes of light first in one eye then in the other. These symptoms are succeeded by headache, nausea, and sometimes vomiting. These headaches come on periodically without any apparent cause. They are often called sick headaches. They run in families. Some women have them well into the prime of life and are in bed in a darkened room with them for a day or two every month. This form of headache is called migraine. It is often confined to one side of the head, hence the name hemicrania. The best treatment is to use hot and cold applications to the back of the neck and cold to the forehead and top of the head. If the face is pale use hot applications; if flushed use cold. of the head. If the face is pale use hot applications; if flushed use cold.

The person addicted to migraine should lead a simple outdoor life with plenty of exercise and fresh air. He should eat lightly and simply, keep the bowels regular, and avoid any excesses. By these means the tendency to haedache will probably disappear. bone of the remedies proposed, as will be seen, include headache medicines, for the reason that all headache medicine which have as their basis in one of the coal-tar products are injurious. Some are positively dangerous. Numerous people have been killed by their use, and the best column to avoid their use entirely.
