Chief Jacques, of the Fire Dept., says that he has come to the conclusion that if the box-puller is to be discovered, the firemen must find him themselves. He further added that he had a good clue which he was closely following and the blow might be expected to fall next week. The parties who pulled the box had been traced to their boarding house and interesting developments might be leoked for. It is understood that the police also have a clue, but it is quite different from that of the chief of the fire dept.

CLARENCE WELDON DEAD. CLARENCE WELDON DEAD.

Last evening little Clarence Weldon, youngest son of Mrs. James Weldon, passed away. The little fellow had been most un-Stanley Boyd, the 13 year old youth fortunate. Two years ago he had an attack of typhoid fever, which was followed by a severe attack of brain fever. Last tall he had the misfortune to be run over by a delivery wagon. Although he apparently re-covered from this accident still its effects were left behind and enlargment of the liver resulted. Last week his nose began to bleed and medical science was at a loss to stop the and medical science was at a loss to stop the hemorrhage. Clarence, who was in his tenth year, was a general favorite and was liked for his bright and boyish ways by both old and, young. Besides his mother, two sisters, Miss Rose Weldon, of St. Mary's Hospital, Detroit, and Belli at home, and two brothers, Edmund and Charlie, survive. The funeral will take place at 3 o'clock Sueday afternoon from the house to St. Joseph's Church thence to St. Anthony's Cemetery.
