FIGHT IN MID-AIR

Two Chicagoans Punched Each Other on a Slanting Roof.

Away Up 175 Feet—Rescued Just in Time From Below.

Chicago, July 18.—The exciting spectacle of two men fighting ferociously 175 feet above the ground, in constant danger of being plunged to certain death below, was witnessed by a great crowd about the new Coliseum building late yesterday.

Richard Collins was distributing clippers about on the roof of the big structure while J. R. Howland was at work on the ground 175 feet below. A brick from above dropped and grazed his head. Angered he went to the roof and accused Collins of dropping it.
They soon began to fight. The roof is only 24 feet wide and slants at an angle of 30 degrees. The fight took place on the west side of the apex of the roof. A misstep would have hurled the combatants to certain death.

The attention of Charles Wilson, foreman in charge of the expanded metal work, was attracted by the struggle of the two men.
Calling to several laborers he rushed to the scene of the conflict. He arrived on the scene in time to seize the fighters as they were in imminent peril of falling together over the edge. The police arrested the fighters. Howland was seriously injured.

A VERY SAD FALL

Woman Christian Endeavorer Drank too Much Brandy.

While Under the Influence She Did Some Stealing and Vainly Tried to Hide Her Crime.

London, July 18.—Caroline E. Keyes pleaded guilty in the Marylebone police court yesterday to the charge of stealing a gold watch and other articles of the value of $110 from rooms in Norfolk Mansions hotel, where she had been staying. When the robbery was reported, the police interrogated Miss Keyes, who after a series of denials to questions, finally opened her trunk and displayed the missing articles. Her explanation was that she had been drinking brandy and while under the influence of the liquor took the property. When she realized the enormity of her act the next morning she tried to place the stolen property but was unable to gain access to the room.

Miss Keyes said she was an American and had come to London to attend the world's Christian Endeavor convention as a delegate from a church in Minnesota. She had come to disseminate the gospel, she said, and while it was true she took the things, she was not guilty in her heart of stealing, for she meant to restore the property if she had the chance. She said she was without money and she remained to allow her to call witnesses as to her character. Miss Keyes had previously stayed at the Hotel Cecil and the Met-ropole.

This design may be employed in silk, flax, or painted in water colors, on linen or velvet, and then stretched over cardboard. This pretty little flower is most showy in red, yellow and a purplish salmon shade, the latter being the rarest specimen. One must use her artistic taste in the arrangement of the colors and flowers to give satisfactory results.

Home Politeness.
It is significant to observe how some men fail to know the way to treat their wives and sisters when they meet them. It seems to be too much trouble to lift their hats or to give their nearest the courtesy they would freely render any woman outside of the domestic circle. This should not be, and the sooner a revolution is accomplished the better. The ablest and most persuasive treatise on the etiquette of the home will not be able by itself to work the change, although it would be helpful toward that end. What is needed is the right training of boys and girls. Courteous behavior should be enforced by parents in the same way as other good qualities are taught.
One of the most successful instructors of the young in our days bears this testimony: "People complain of the way children behave, and lay the blame of their behavior on the day-school; and if they would only make the children do at home as they are required to do in school matters would be different. They laugh at the child who lifts his hat, or says 'Please' or 'Thank you,' forgetting that others are trying to make up for their neglect of duty."

An Occasion of Great Joy.
"Was the dear girl happily married?" asked the friend.
"Yes, indeed," answered Miss Mc-Gibbie. "It was one of the happiest weddings I ever saw. I never saw so few duplicates among the presents of cut glass and silverware."—Washington Star.

Beware of using the personal pronoun "I" too freely in your talk when you are talking in a room full of people. Egotists are often amusing and entertaining, but as often they are very much out of order.—Ladies' Home Journal.

TWO LOST MINES.

Legends of the Blue Bucket and the Lost Basin.

"About as complete a story of the lost mines of the Great West as I have ever read I saw in the Sunday Sun the other day," said John E. Wash, a mining man from Spokane, Wash., who was at one of the hotels here last week. "The article covered all but two of the legends of lost mines that I know of and these two are famous all over the Northwest. Many a prospector has outfitted at Spokane for the search for the Lost Basin and the Blue Bucket mines, propositions that have hitherto cluded all efforts to find them. The Blue Bucket mine lies somewhere in Oregon, on a line drawn from the big bend of the Snake River, where it flows northward on its way to the Columbia, and extending to Yreka, Cal.
"It was sometime in 1850, I believe that a party of home seekers struck off in the foothills of the Rockies on the Oregon trail for the northwestern California to venture into northern California. They were farmers, pure and simple, and the news of the discovery of gold in California had never reached them. They had left the bend of the Snake River some days—unfortunately the story is not definite as to the number of days—behind them and they camped one evening on the banks of a stream, where they rested their oxen and horses for a couple of days. While the men of the party hunted for fresh meat and the women spent the time in washing clothes, the children wandered about in the vicinity of the camp picking berries, carrying with them, as the story has it, 'one of those old-fashioned blue buckets.' Odds are that the blue bucket was an important part of the Argonaut's outfit in those days.

"One day at noon the children hurried into camp, two of them struggling with the weight of their buckets. The bottom of the buckets was covered with yellow metal. They said they had tried to dig out of the ground some deep rooted bush bearing a flower that pleased them, intending to plant it in the bucket and take it along, and they found the pieces of metal in the ground.
Everybody gathered about the find, and nobody could make anything of it. The pieces varied from the size of a pumpkin seed to an egg.

"The Argonauts had no use for a single pound of useless weight, and when the party started off all the metal was thrown away but a few pieces, which the children were allowed to keep for jackstones, and heavy jackstones they were, too. Of course when they reached the playthings were recognized as gold. Then there was stamped over the Oregon lava beds for the Blue Bucket mine, but snow had fallen east of the Cascade range and the track was lost. Two of the pieces of the party spent the lives looking for the lost placer ground and died in poverty; the others settled down to farming and succeeded at it. Every few years some prospector takes a notion to make his fortune by finding the Blue Bucket mine, but no gold has since ever been discovered in that whole stretch of southern Oregon.

"The Lost Basin is a legendary quartz proposition, hidden in a beautiful basin in the Bitter Root Mountains of southern Idaho. A packer who was employed by one of the expeditions that made a preliminary survey of the Union Pacific Railway made the discovery in the romantic way that is characteristic of the finding of all these lost mines.
He was alone at night in the wildest part of the mountain range, and George Harvey, that was the packer's name, was detailed to find them, having first been supplied with a horse to carry his bed and grub. He was instructed to hurry along as soon as he found the mules, as the engineers in charge of the expedition had declared that as the country was impracticable for a railroad, they would lose no time in pushing westward to the main camp where the various surveying parties were to meet.

"Harvey started on the trail early on the morning of the breaking up of the camp and found the mules in a little valley gazing. He secured them without trouble and led to camp as night had fallen. In the morning he looked around. A peculiar rock formation, twenty feet wide, protruding from the ground a foot, and extending 100 yards to the edge of a stream, arrested his attention. The rock was soft and Harvey chopped up a yard or more of the surface. A yellow glint caught his eye and he picked up a 'string' of pure gold a foot long, and weighing a half pound.
There was plenty more of the valuable metal in the spot, and after chopping up the surface at various places on the rock, Harvey satisfied himself that he had discovered a great free milling gold ledge, big enough to make him a millionaire several times over.

"Concealing several pounds of gold about his person, he moved out of the valley, after impressing the narrow entrance upon his mind. He soon found the surveying party had hurried along so fast that they left no marks, blazes on trees or otherwise, to indicate the way they had taken, and as he had to depend on the intelligence of his horse and the mules to find the way he disregarded all the landmarks. He finally arrived at the main camp, saying working about his discovery, and working at his job until the next summer.

"Finally he made a confidant of 'Old Jim Henderson' whose eyes bulged when he saw the evidence in pure gold of Harvey's discovery. Both men put their savings together—they were afraid to try to dispose of Harvey's gold, as then the secret would have been theirs no longer—purchased an outfit and started for the basin or valley. Of course they never found it. Rocks and peaks and streams were no landmarks to Harvey, for he had neglected to notice them on his former hurried trip to the main camp. The two wandered through the mountains all summer and came off at the winter set in. At the settlement where the four-shedding town of Boise now is they took others into their confidence, who were convinced of the truth of Harvey's story by a sight of the gold which he still kept. Many an expedition was organized, but the basin was lost for good, apparently. Even to-day an occasional prospector makes search for the Lost Basin.

DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION

"I had been a sufferer for many years from nervousness with all its symptoms and complications," writes Mrs. O. N.
Fisher, 1861 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. "I was constantly going to see a physician or purchasing medicine. In the spring of 1897 my husband induced me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. After taking one bottle and following your advice I was so encouraged that I took five more bottles, and then stopped for several weeks as I felt so much better, but still I was not completely cured. I commenced taking it again and felt that I was improving faster than at first. I am not now cross and irritable, and I have a good color in my face; have also gained about ten pounds in weight and one thousand pounds of comfort, for I am a new woman once more and your advice and your 'Favorite Prescription' is the cause of it, coupled with the 'Pleasant Pellets', which are not to be dispensed with. I took eight bottles of the 'Prescription' the last time, making fourteen in all, and will not take any more unless you so advise, for I do not see as I need it."

Nursery Rhymes.

A foolish little frog Once thought that he could ride, So hopping from his log He dressed himself and tried.
But the horse wouldn't go And so he up and slid, Throwing froggy off, you know, Where he just laid and cried.

Conundrums.

What is the difference between a hill and a pill? One is hard to get up, and the other is hard to get down.
What is that which has neither flesh nor blood yet has four fingers and a thumb? A glove.
Why should a horse never be hungry? Because most of the time he has a bit in his mouth.
When is sugar like a pig's tooth?
When it is in a hoghead.
What nation produces the most marriages? Fascination.
Why is a man who has nothing but his illustrious ancestry to boast of like a potato? Because the only good belonging to him is underground.
What time is it when the clock strikes thirteen? Time the clock was fixed.
Which side of a horse should be taken in mounting? The outside.
Why are good husbands like dough?
Because women need (knead) them.
What reason have we to suppose that beer was made in the ark? Because the kangaroo was seen to go in with hops.
Why is a phrenologist like a soldier desirous of promotion? Because he must apply to head-quarters.
Why does a bay horse never pay toll? Because his master pays it for him.
Why is a writing-master like a kingdom? Because both require a ruler.
Why are ladies the greatest thieves in existence? Because they steal petticoats, bone stays, and crib babies.
Where can even the most miserable find sympathy? In the dictionary.
It's a good sign when her sex thinks well of a woman.
