Barnum, who was here last summer offered him ten thousand dollars to go with him, but was indignantly refused. He has been twice scalped. Every distinct tribe has its own method of performing that delightful operation. Some take a strip off from front backwards; some a round piece off the side; some the crown, &c. The British fleet continues to guard Only one or two ever take the whole scalp. At the massacre three years ago, above referred to, he war attacked and fought valiantly against overwhelming odds. His ammunition giving out, he fought with the stock of his gun until it broke, and then took off his boots, and fought with them. Overpowered at last, he was left for dead, scalped, the sinews of his arm taken (ut for arrow strings, and so mangled and injured that when found and cared for it was four months before he recovered. Last week when the Utahs were here, he took off his hat one day, whereat they clapped their hands gleefully and cried out, "Apache! Apache!" signifying what tribe had scalped him. He replied with the witticism, "Yis, ye rid divils, ye'll ne'er do't agin." As two tonsorial operators had left him but little scalp, there was evidently a fine point to the
