A Neat Little Fortune.

Clang! clang! clang! sounded the motorman's warning bell, but the weary little widow heeded it not. She was making her way through the wet and crowded crossings to the San Fernando street car in the next block, and was burdened by heavy and unhandy packages containing household supplies just purchased at the store near her office.

Clang! clang! clang! The fat policeman at the corner, seeing her danger, began to move toward her, but the venerable Judge Bradstreet, suddenly near her, pressed forward, seized her by the shoulder and swung her aside, and was himself struck senseless by the heavy interurban electric as it dashed past on its way to Los Gatos, up among the foothills.

The weary little widow, dazed and helpless, lost her footing as the thoughtless but well meaning crowd pressed forward to the Judge's relief, and the next instant she was lying on the sidewalk, her bundles and umbrellas scattered in the street. The Judge was lifted into the drag-stone at the corner, while the little widow, in great pain from a sprained ankle, was taken to St. Anthony's Hospital, out in the suburbs of the beautiful little California city that was her home. The Judge's injuries proved to be less serious, and he was soon able to walk out again.

Several weeks later Judge Bradstreet received a letter from an old Harvard alum in Boston, making inquiries about Theodore Templeton, the son of a classmate of theirs—Theodore Templeton, sr., who had died many years before. Young Theodore, inheriting his father's entire estate, had married a fine girl and gone West "to grow up with the country," as he expressed it. His eastern friends had lost sight of him these ten years past. Now it seemed that the Harvard alum of his father had got an important letter from Georgia inquiring the whereabouts of the Templetons; and in turn had inquired of Judge Bradstreet, who replied that he knew nothing of the young couple.

But Providence would not have it so. That evening, around the library table of the Judge's palatial home on the Alameda—that beautiful historic highway of the Mission Padres—his granddaughter, in recounting to him the happenings of the day, as was her custom, mentioned that she had seen "that little Templeton woman on the street to-day down near the Court House."

"Templeton! Templeton! The Judge exclaimed reflectively. "Is that the name of the little woman who came so near being run over by the interurban a few weeks ago?" "Yes, grandpa. Don't you remember the lovely letter she wrote you thanking you for what you did for her—the letter of a lady—a cutting-d, high-bred lady, even if she is only a working-woman?"

The Judge's granddaughter was not of the Western "snobocracy," and therefore was able to see that a working-woman might be a lady. "Templeton!" the Judge repeated. "I wonder if she could be connected in any way with those Templetons Graham was writing about?" "I just answered a letter from him to-day."

In the unsettled life of the West, young Templeton might have lost his fortune. Such things happen everywhere, for that matter, the Judge reflected, especially with such reckless young fellows as he recalled Theodore Jr., and his associates to have been.

"Where does this little woman work, my dear?" "I don't know, grandpa; but we could find out by asking Sister Benedicta at St. Anthony's." "Then go out and telephone at once, please. This matter is growing interesting." And the Judge's quick legal mind was at work.

Returning duly from the telephone, the granddaughter informed him that all Sister Benedicta knew

Aching Joints

In the fingers, toes, arms, and other parts of the body, are joints that are inflamed and swollen by rheumatism—that acid condition of the blood which affects the muscles also.

Sufferers dread to move, especially after sitting or lying long, and the condition is commonly worse in wet weather.

"I suffered dreadfully from rheumatism but have been completely cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, for which I am deeply grateful." Miss Frances Smith, Prescott, Ont.

"I had an attack of the grip which left me weak and helpless and suffering from rheumatism. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and this medicine has entirely cured me. I have no hesitation in saying it saved my life." M. J. McDonald, Trenton, Ont.

of the case was what the hospital records stated: "Mrs. Veronica Templeton. Born in Crawfordsville, Georgia. Age, thirty-five." The Sister added that Judge Bradstreet might secure the desired information from the Rev. Father Melvin, of St. Elizabeth's Church, who visited the patient in question during her stay at the hospital.

"Sister Benedicta must have reached the height of innocent unboisterously, despite the judicial dignity that set so becoming upon his venerable and aristocratic head.

"Has she forgotten that no woman likes to have her age disclosed? Go and call up Father Melvin," he went on. "This is really extraordinary! Young Templeton married a Georgia girl of high family. I remember Graham mentioned it when he wrote me of old Templeton's death twelve or fifteen years ago. I believe I've got a 'clue,' as the detectives say. Yes, I'm sure of it."

"Would it not be more dignified and respectful for you to call on the priest?" put in the granddaughter, to which the old man replied:

"Of course, my dear! And that is just what I'll do tomorrow morning."

And he did. Father Melvin was about to start out on an urgent sick call, and could not linger longer than to say:

"Judge, I'll stop at your office in an hour. One of my poor Mexicans is dying, and I must make speed to reach him in time."

"Well, I'm blessed!" exclaimed the Judge mentally, as the rosy-cheeked Irish priest hurried past him. "A good-for-nothing Mexican 'greaser' must be looked after, while Judge Bradstreet, of the Superior Court, on an important business errand, is sent away unheard!"

The Judge was a Protestant, used to be treated somewhat obsequiously by his fellow religionists; and while he secretly admired the priest's straightforward, though courtly, demure, he was still a little piqued at such treatment.

He quite forgot his pique, however, when, an hour later, Father Melvin appeared, and with hearty handshake and friendly voice, greeted the old jurist:

"Well, Judge, how can I serve you?" The Judge went straight to the point.

"Do you know a little woman by the name of Veronica Templeton?" "I do," the priest replied with equal frankness and brevity.

"Where is she employed?" continued the questioner.

"She is a deputy in the County Recorder's office."

"Is she the wife of Theodore Templeton, of Boston?" "She is his widow."

And then the priest and the lawyer set to and cleared up the whole affair, and the latter sent the following telegram to his old Harvard chum:

"Have found Theodore Templeton's widow. What's up? Bradstreet."

II. "The same old story!" sighed the weary little widow, as she placed the large sheet on the cylinder of her Remington and began copying the familiar deed form:

"For and in consideration of the love and affection which the said party of the first part does and bears unto the said party of the second part, as also for the better maintenance, support, protection and livelihood of the said party of the first part does by these presents give, grant," etc., etc.

"How I wish somebody, for love and affection, or any other motive, would remember me like that!" And the little widow fell into a sort of subconscious reverie as she looked at her typewriting machine went on.

What did it avail her now that the blood of some of the best Southern families flowed in her veins? What did it matter that her careful education and early associations fitted her for something better than an office slave? What did the wealth and position of her Southern relatives

Was All Run Down.

Mrs. M. McLean, Debec Junction, N. B. writes—"I wish to tell you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. Three years ago I was so run down I could not do my own work. I went to a doctor, and he told me I had heart trouble and that my nerves were all unstrung. I took his medicine, as he ordered me to do, but it did me no good. I then started to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and had only taken one box before I started to feel better, so I continued their use until I had taken several boxes, and I am now strong and well, and able to do my own work. When I commenced taking your pills I weighed 125 pounds, and now weigh 185 and have given birth to a lovely young daughter, which was a happy thing in the family. When I commenced taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I could not go upstairs without resting before I got to the top. I can now go up without any trouble."

The price of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills is 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, all dealers or mail order direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"Your husband appears to believe in himself so thoroughly!" "Yes—he is credulous."

Reputation is what enables you to get along in this world when you haven't any character.

And his experience of the past infuses into his heart an unshaken confidence in the future. And he feels, or rather he knows, that the same loving and omnipotent Hand, that has conducted him safely and securely step by step, through all the tangled mazes of his early life will see him safely to the end, and that 'He who has begun a good work will see it through to the end.'

And as his interest in this world diminishes, so does his interest in the next increase. He thinks less of those whom he must leave, and more and more of those who are awaiting him in the great beyond. His trembling limbs and tottering footsteps warn him that his earthly habitation is falling to pieces, and that his soul, untouched by Time's destructive fingers, will soon reach its term and be with God a companion of the angels, a fellow citizen with the saints, a dweller in the Heavenly Jerusalem and a courier of the Heavenly King. Then he reflects upon the peace of the eternal home, which surpasseth all understanding; and of the freedom from every ill; of the glorious company of prophets and apostles, confessors and martyrs, saints and angels of the glorious Queen of them all, so dazzling and unutterably beautiful; but, above all and before all, of Him whose beauty saints and angels and Mary herself do but faintly and inadequately reflect. And then the tears of joy at the bare prospect of so intoxicating a future gather in his eyes, and he grows sick with an unutterable longing and with the pain of hope deferred.

And so, amid hopes and fears, the old man stretches forth his feeble hands towards the light, till at last his imprisoned soul is released from the body's dismal cell, and he learns for the first time that all is well, and realizes the essence of true, unadulterated happiness.
