

Sacrifice

Sing not to me of earthly power, For winds make sport of the dust of kings; Men fought and bled for trivial things, Sing me the prayer that lifts from some white heart, As earth's immortal part, For deeds that live to gain reward, And dreams that barter Love for Fame: These all shall die as with a sword, And be forever linked with shame. The great white visions born of pain and death, These have eternal breath, And as a comet sweeps the sky, To reappear through cycling years, So shall Love's deeds supreme and high, Enkindle hope again from tears. Sing me Love's utter sacrifice and loss— Christ's death upon the Cross. —J. Corson Miller.

A Striking Instance of Providence

(The Ave Maria.)

That a prominent part in the events detailed in the following narrative was taken by the late venerable Archbishop Lynch, of Toronto, lends to the story an atmosphere of actuality which will enhance its interests for the majority of our readers. Apart from this adventitious circumstance, however, the narrative furnishes a very notable instance of the unfailing providence so often and so wonderfully displayed by the Venerable Cure of Ars.

Among the students in the Grand Seminary of Autun (France) in 1850 was a youth named Jean Pierre Antoine Captier, Convinced that he had received a call from God to the ecclesiastical state, he had generously responded; and for two years lived very happily, pursuing his clerical studies with commendable industry and notable success. Suddenly, in 1852, he became subject to an extraordinary trouble. The nervous reaction consequent thereon was such that his taking part in the liturgical ceremonies, and more especially the ceremonies of the Mass, became quite impossible. For a long time the young levite fought against this mysterious impression; but his struggle was futile. Hardly could he take into his hand any of the objects having to do with divine service before an irresistible force impelled him to throw them away or, if they were of a fragile nature, to crush them to pieces.

The perspective was plainly a sorrowful one. Could M. Captier be admitted to sacred orders, either at present or at any future period? The authorities decided the question in the negative, and he left the Grand Seminary.

On July 7, the same year, Madame Captier and her afflicted son arrived at Ars. The mother alone first approached the Cure to explain the sad situation. His remark to her was:

"Tis not your son's body, but his imagination, that is sick. You must not count on him to help your family."

On the following evening, as the Cure was preparing to give Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament, Jean Captier presented himself at the door of the sacristy. It was the first interview of the two. The venerable priest immediately turned toward the young man. His countenance was resplendent, his eyes luminous. In a strong and vibrant tone, he repeated three times to Captier, who had not as yet said a word:

"My friend, you will become a religious priest."

"In what Order will I be a priest?" asked the young pilgrim, suppressing his emotion as best he could.

"The Order does not yet exist."

"Well, Father, at what time will this take place, and must I return to the Grand Seminary?" "No; you must wait. Don't enter any Grand Seminary. And if you seek admission into any

Pains in the Back

The symptoms of a weak, torpid or stagnant condition of the kidneys or liver, and are a warning it is extremely hazardous to neglect, the important healthy action of these organs. They are commonly attended by loss of energy, lack of courage, and sometimes by gloomy foreboding and despondency.

"I was taken ill with kidney trouble, and scarce so weak I could scarcely get around took medicine without benefit, and finally decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. After a first bottle I felt so much better that I continued its use, and six bottles made me a new woman. When my little girl was a boy, she could not keep anything on her stomach, and we gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla which cured her." Mrs. Thomas Lewis, Wallaceburg, Ont.

Another congregation than the one for which you are destined, you will not remain in it."

When, on July 9, M. Captier went to say good-bye to the Cure, the latter remarked with impressive benignity:

"The good God will bless you, my young friend."

Somewhat surprised, the youth gave the priest a glance of inquiry. Then taking him by the arm, M. Vianney said, with combined force and suavity:

"Yes, the good God will bless you. Two years went by. Tired of waiting, M. Captier entered the Third Order Regular of St. Dominic at Soresse. His infirmity persisting, however, he did not long remain there. M. Vianney had told him he would not. Utterly discouraged, the young man again betook himself to Ars. The gentle Cure consoled him.

"Never mind," said he; willy-nilly, one day you will be a priest."

"But, Father, the difficulties appear insurmountable."

"Don't let that trouble you. The matter will arrange itself without your intervention. The Blessed Virgin will do everything."

"Anyway, I shall have to be cured first, Father."

"Not at all necessary. Your ordination will be your cure."

"And how can I be ordained? Everybody tells me that it is impossible."

"You will find some one who will understand you well—a stranger, I think, who will remove every obstacle."

These predictions, rose-coloured though they were, appeared to be rather tardy of realization. He resolved to go to Rome to seek a solution of his difficulties. Moreover, as he had been denounced as one not exempted from military service, the gendarmes were on the lookout for him. Before starting for the Eternal City, he went once more to consult the oracle of Ars. After celebrating Mass for him at the altar of the Blessed Virgin, M. Vianney, who himself had once been similarly situated, said to him:

"Their pursuit of you will stop and you will not be disturbed."

This prediction was verified at once. From that day the agents of the Government seemed to have forgotten all about the illegal situation of the ex-seminarist. There was never any further question of his conscription.

The journey to Rome was bootless. One circumstance, however, offered some little hope. Cardinal Gaspari, Bishop of Frascati, proposed to admit M. Captier into his diocese and ordain him. Funds were required to constitute a "clerical title."

The Captier family possessed only one house. M. Vianney was consulted as to the advisability of selling it; and his decision was:

"Sell it. This vocation is so important that everything must be sacrificed for its sake; and the good God will indemnify you."

A purchaser was found who paid for the house fifteen thousand francs. (The precise amount is a detail to be remembered.) Apart from the persistence of Captier's malady, however, an incident occurred to shatter all hopes. The episcopal notary wished to receive the funds previous to the ordination. The

Cramps in Stomach

Never Suffered Worse Pains.

There is no other kind of bowel trouble that comes on one so quickly and with so little warning as an attack of cramps in the stomach. These are very painful, and when you are seized in this way, and are all doubled up, you want a remedy you are sure will give you relief, and give it quickly too.

You don't want some untried medicine that might only help you. You want Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. Every one who has ever used it knows that a dose or two will give instant relief.

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is one of those remedies that should be in every house, as no one knows just when some member of the family may be attacked with diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera, cramps colic or some other bowel complaint.

Mrs. S. E. Clark, Dorion Station, Ont., writes:—"While visiting my mother in town, I was taken very sick with cramps in my stomach. I don't think I ever suffered worse pains. I went and got a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and in a couple of hours I was all right again. I went to ride eight miles home in the evening. I can't praise your wonderful medicine enough."

Dr. Fowler's extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for the past 74 years. Don't experiment with new and untried remedies. Refer to substitutes. They may be dangerous.

family was advised not to submit to this demand, and His Eminence could do no more.

In the meantime, at Ars, the saintly pastor, firm as ever in his confidences, gave to Madame Captier a note for her son. The message ran:

You will certainly become a priest, despite your indisposition and all other obstacles."

Fortified by this statement, and furnished with the recommendation of the Cardinal, Jean Captier set sail for the Island of Scio, in the Aegean Sea, in the hope of securing from its Bishop, Mgr. Giustiniani, the realization of his desires. His strange and implacable malady, however, again interposed as an insurmountable obstacle. This was in 1857. For five years he had been struggling against his cruel destiny. Returning to France, he hastens to Ars. The invariable promise awaits him there—will always await him.

"You will be a priest; the Blessed Virgin will do everything; live beforehand as if in thanksgiving."

Inaction exasperates certain temperaments, and waiting becomes impossible to them. Despite his previous failures, the pilgrim to Ars now entered the Congregation of the Marist Fathers. Conformably to the Cure's original prediction, he was obliged to leave it at the end of the year. Again, and for the last time, Jean Captier had had an interview with M. Vianney who simply reiterated his former statements.

I tried many salves and liniments also doctored continuously for the blood, but got no permanent relief, till last winter when my mother got me to try MINARD'S LINIMENT. Had Fainting Spells. TOOK AWFUL FALLS.

Miss Mrs. F. Yatesian, Krugersdorf, Ont., writes:—"I feel that I must write and tell you of the great benefit I have received from Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. About three and a half years ago I was taken terribly ill with my heart, nerves and fainting spells, and was down in bed for about six months. I doctored with two different doctors and seemed to get better although the fainting spells would not leave me. I would take such terrible falls whenever I was that it was not safe to leave me alone at any time. At last I decided to resort to proprietary medicines and took several different kinds, but seemed to receive but little benefit from any of them. One day noticing the advertisement of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I decided to try them and before I had taken more than two boxes I could see they were helping me. I have taken about ten boxes and am almost cured of those terrible spells. I sincerely feel that your medicine has proved a blessing to me, and I would advise anyone troubled with their hearts to try it as I am confident they will find relief."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of five by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

For the information of our many patrons, in both town and country, we deem it necessary to announce that the Coal Business, successfully carried on in the past by the late Mr. Charles Lyons, will be continued by the Estate, under the old firm name of C. Lyons & Co.

By maintaining a high standard of service and by courteous and honest treatment of the public, this firm has, for a period of more than a quarter of a century, enjoyed a large and ever-increasing patronage; and in announcing our intention of "carrying on," we desire, most earnestly, to give expression to our appreciation thereof. We are
