APTER V. HIS STORY.

WILL set down, if only to get rid m, a few incidents of this day.

Trivial they are, ludicrously so, to any one but me; yet they have left me sitting with my head in my hands, stupid boom of the bell we took at Sebastopol gerous pitfals than matrimony. So I -starting and shivering like a nervous Strange! there, in the Crimea, in the lady was the one I had seen? midst of danger, hardship, and misery of all kinds, I was at peace, even happy; happier than for many years. I seemed to have lived down, and nearly obliterated from thought, that one day, one consent, of course. Her father is quite hour, one moment, which was but a mo- respectable—a clergyman, you are aware; ment. Can it, ought it, to weigh against and she is such a handsome girl-would a whole existence? or, as some religionists do credit to any man's taste. Also, she would tell us, against an eternity? Yet likes me-a trifle." what is time, what is eternity? Nay, rather, what is man, measuring himself, his atom of good or ill, either done or suffered, against God?

These are vain speculations, which I link in the chain of reasoning is painfully familiar. I had better give it up and of my day?

let Jews and Christians battle it outthere would still be needful a day of rest; cheerful, holy time: a resting-place beearthly repose, and to look forward to tell my father?" that rest which, we are told, "remaineth for the people of God." The people of you had better do it now. 'No time God; no other people ever do rest, even like the present, always." in this world.

Treherne passed my hut soon afte breakfast, and popped his head in, not but it was not quite absorbing; and ocover welcomely, I confess, for I was casional glimpses of Treherne's troubled giving myself the rare treat of a bit of and puzzled face amused me, as well as unprofessional reading. I had not seen made me thoughtful. him for two or three days, not since we It was natural that having been in appointed to go together to the general's some slight way concerned in it, this matdinner, and he never appeared all the ter, foreign as it was to the general tenor evening.

"I say, doctor, will you go to church?" sword shall perish by the sword," etc., husband and wife. and write; got personally acquainted but make; otherwise, I had not meddled with every fellow in the regiment; knew in his courting, which, in my opinion, all their private histories, wrote their no third party has a right to do. beloved than our chaplain. He is an was the clergyman, and be introduced. admirable fellow - everywhere but in the pulpit.

have always been in the habit of attend- no joke, I assure you.' ing some Christian worship somewhere, because it is the simplest way of showing that I am not ashamed of my Master be fore men.

Therefore I would not smile at Tre herne's astonishing fit of piety, but simply assented, at which he evidently was disappointed.

"You see, I'm turning respectable, and going to church. I wonder such an exceedingly respectable and religious fellow as you, Urquhart, has not tried to make me go sooner.

"If you go against your will and be cause it's respectable, you had better stop away.

"Thank you; but suppose I have my own reasons for going?

He is not a deep fellow; there is no deceit in the lad. All his faults are up permost, which makes them bearable. "Come, out with it. Better make clean breast to me. It will not be the herne. first time.

"Well, then-ahem!" twisting his wished it."

" Who ?" "The lady you know of. In truth, I At last I lifted my head to observe may as well tell you, for I want you to him. speak up for me to her father, and also done for myself."

Popped, and been accepted. Yes, since Friday I have been an engaged man, Behind his foolishness was some na-and idle, starting, each hour, at the the world is full of many more rich danexpressed myself in the customary con-

Treherne nodded.

"Sir William knows it. "Not yet. Didn't I tell you I wanted you to break it to him? Though he will

And he pulled his moustache with a recognition of his great felicity.

I saw no reason to question it, such a it was. He was a well-looking fellow, likely to please women; and this one, have gone over and over again till every though there was not much in her, appeared kindly and agreeable. The other sister, whom I talked with, was someturn to ordinary things. Dear imaginary thing more. They were, no doubt, a correspondent, shall I tell you the story perfectly unobjectionable family; nor did I think that Sir William, who was It began peacefully. I always rest on anxious for his son to marry early, would a Sunday, if I can. I believe, even had refuse consent to any creditable choice. Heaven not hallowed one day in the But decidedly he ought to be told at seven-Saturday or Sunday matters not, once-ought, indeed, to have been consulted beforehand. I said so.

"Can't help that. It happened un and that day would still be a blessed expectedly. I had, when I entered day. Instinct, old habit, and later conviction, always incline me to "keep the than—than your cat, doctor. Upon my Sabbath." not, indeed, after the strict soul 'tis the fact! Well, well, marriage fashion of my forefathers, but as a happy, is a man's fate. He can no more help himself in the matter than a stone can tween week and week, in which to enjoy help rolling down hill. All's over, and specially all righteous pleasures and I'm glad of it. So, will you write, and "Certainly not. Do it yourself, and

I pushed toward him pens, ink, and paper; and returned to my book again;

of my busy life, should interest me a lit-tle. Though I viewed it, not from the Now I do usually attend our airy mili- younger, but from the elder side, I my tary chapel, all doors and windows, open self never knew either father or mother to every kind of air except airs from they died when I was a child, but I heaven, of which I am afraid our chap- think, whether or not we possess it in lain does not bring with him a large youth, we rarely come to my time of life quantity. He leaves us to fatten upon without having a strong instinctive feelroots without throwing us a ing of the rights of parents, being worthy crumb of Christianity; prefers Moses and parents. Rights, of course modified in the prophets to the New Testament; no their extent by the higher claims of the wonder, as some few doctrine's there, Father of all; but second to none other, "Do unto others as ye would they should except, perhaps, those which He has do unto you," "He that taketh the himself made superior-the rights of message of the Church's Great Head, would sound particularly odd in a mili- I felt, when I came to consider it, extary chapel, especially with his elucida, ceedingly sorry that Treherne had made tion of them, for he is the very poorest a proposal of marriage without consulting preacher I ever heard. Yet a worthy his father. But it was no concern of man, a most sincere man; did a world of mine. Even his "taking my advice," good out in the Crimea; used to spend was, he knew well, his own exaggeration letters home, sought them out in the So I washed my hands of the whole battle-field and in the hospital, read to affair, except consenting to Treherne's them, cheered them, comforted them, earnest request that I would go with and closed their eyes. There was not an him, this morning, to the little village officer in the regiment more deservedly church of which the young lady's father

"A tough old gentleman, too, as sharp as a needle, as hard as a rock-walking Nevertheless, I attend his chapel, as I into his study, yesterday morning, was

"But you said he had consented." "Ah! yes, all's right. That is, it will be when I hear from the governor."

All this while, by a curious amatory eccentricity, he had never mentioned the lady's name. Nor had I asked, because I knew it. Also, because that surname, common as it is, is still extremely pain ful to me, either to utter or to hear.

We came late into church, and sat by the door. It was a pleasant September forenoon; there was sunshine outside far away across the moors. I had never been to this village before; it seemed a pretty one, and the church old and picturesque. The congregation consisted almost entirely of poor people, except one family, which I concluded to be the clergyman's. He was in the reading-

"That's her father," whispered Tre-

"Oh, indeed." But I did not look a him for a minute or so; I could not. sash and looking down with most extra- Such moments will come, despite of ordinary modesty, "the fact is, she reasoning, belief, conviction, when I see a person bearing any name resembling

A calm hard regular face: well-shaped queer that I should not have wondered as startlingly and vividly as, I have panion, nor would I vent at even that catastrophe.

"Not quite, but next door to it ory will have impressed on them, through of the Apollo Belvidere. life, as their favo to type of beauty, the countenance of their first love.

I could sit down now, at case, Behind his foolishness was some natural feeling, mixed with a rather comical awe of his own position.

Listen to this gentleman's reading of the prayers. His reading was what might have been expected from his face—classi-For me, I was a good deal surprised; cal, accurate, intelligent, gentlemanly. yet he might have come to a worse end.

And the congregation listened with respect, as to a clever exposition of things quite beyond their comprehension Except the gauble-gabble of the Sunday school, and the clerk's loud "A-a-men!" gratulations, adding that I concluded the the minister had the service entirely to

> A beautiful service; as I, though at heart a Presbyterian, still must avow; especially when heard—as I have heard it-at sea, in hospital, at the camp. Not this camp, but ours in the Crimea, where all through the prayers, guns kept boom ing, and shells kept flying, sometimes within a short distance of the chapel it self. I mind of one Sunday, little more than a year ago, for it must have been on the ninth of September, when I stopped on my way from Balaclava hospital, to hear service read in the open air, on a hill-side. It was a cloudy day, I remember; below, brown with the long drought, stretched the Balaclava plains opposite, gray and still, rose the high ountains on the other side of the Tchernaya; while far away to the right, toward our camp, one could just trace the white tents of the Highland regiments; Johnson. and to the left, hidden by the Col de Balaclava, a dull, perpetual rumble, and and he marched off by her side in a mos clouds of smoke hanging in the air, showed where six miles off, was being enacted the fall of Sebastopol-though at the time we did not know it: this little congregation, mustered just outside hospital tent, where, I remember, not but faded-looking, with very black eyes. stone's throw from where we, the living knelt, lay a row of those straight, still formless forms, the more awful because through the church-yard, and into the from familiarity they had ceased to be road. As I held the wicket-gate open felt as such-each sewn up in the blank- for her to pass, she looked up, smiled, et, its only coffin, waiting for burialwaiting also, we believe and hope, for the resurrection from the dead.

What a sermon our chaplain might; I replied, "Yes, I did;" that she have preached! what words I, or any the young lady who "hated soldiers." man, could surely have found to say at we did hear were the merest platitudesso utterly trival and out of place, that I do not now recall a single sentence. cially on that evening." Strange that people-good Christian mer as I knew that man to be-should go or droning out "words, words, words," when bodies and souls perish in thousands round them; or splitting theological hairs to poor fellows, who, except in an oath, are ignorant even of the Divine name: or thundering anathemas at them for going down to the pit of perdition without even so much as pointing out to them the bright but narrow way.

I was sitting thus, absorbed in the neavy thoughts that often come to me when thus quiet in church, hearing often some man, who is supposed to be one of the Church's teachers, delivering the

It was one of the clergyman's three daughters; the youngest, probably, for her seat was in the most uncomfortable corner of the pew, apparently the same ! had talked with at Mrs. Granton's, though hours daily in teaching our men to read of an abstract remark which I could not I was not sure-ladies look so different in their bonnets. Hers was close. noticed, and decently covering the head. not dropping off on her shoulders like those I see ladies wearing, which will assuredly multiply ophthalmic cases with all sorts of head and face complaint as the winter winds come on. Such exposure must be painful, too, these blind ing sunny days. How can women stand the torments they have to undergo in matters of dress I If I had any woman kind belonging to me-pshaw! what ar idle speculation.

Those two eyes, steadfastly inquiring with a touch of compassion in them, startled me. Many a pair of eager eves have I had to meet, but it was always their own fate, or that of some one dear to them, which they were anxious to learn; they never sought to know any thing of me or mine. Now these did.

I am nervously sensitive of even kindly scrutiny. Involuntarily I moved so that one of the pillars came between me and those eyes. When we stood up to sing but gifted with great good sense, suffishe kept them steadily upon her hymnbook, nor did they wander again during other direction.

The face being just opposite in the ine of the pulpit, I could not help seeing it during the whole of the discourse which was, as I expected, classical, be labored, elegant, and interesting, after do?" the pattern of the preacher's countenance.

His daughter is not like him. In re pose, her features are ordinary; nor die they for one moment recall to me the flashing, youthful face, full of action and energy, which had amused me that night at the Cedars. Some faces catch the reflection of the moment so vividly that you never see them twice alike. Others, solidly and composedly handsome, scarcely vary at all, and I think it is of Grantons ever since I was a child." to break it to my governor. I've taken features; high, narrow forehead, acquil these last that one would soonest weary. your advice, and been, and gone, and ine nose -a totally different type from Irregular features have generally most santly to come, sudden and sensitive as a done for myself."

one which I so well remember that any character. The Venus di Medici would child's. I imagined that time was not so mend them highly enough."—B., Rochwarf of the was made a very stupid fireside companion, nor would I venture to enter for about "my youngest sister," which Oxford honors a son who had the profile proved I had be Treherne is evidently of a opinion. He sat beaming out admiration upon that large, fair statuesque woman who had turned so that her pure Greek profile was distinctly visible against the red cloth of the high pew. She might have known what a pretty picture she was making. She will please Sir William who admires beauty, and she seems refined enough even for Lady Augusta Treherne. I thought to myself the lad might have gone farther and fared worse. His marriage was sure to have been one of pure accident, he is not a young man either to have had the decision to choose. or the firmness to win and keep.

Service ended, he asked me what I thought of her, and I said much as I heartedness, she must have found me have written here. He appeared satis-

the family; the father remains in church. I shall walk home with them. Ah! she

The lad was all eagerness and excite ment. He must be considerably in earn-"Now, doctor, come-nay, pray do."

For I hesitated. Hesitation was too late, however; the introduction took place; Treherne hurried it over; though I listened acutely I could not be certain of the name. It seemed to be, as I already believed Treherne's beauty met him, all smiles determined manner, the elder sister following and joining the pair, doubtless to the displeasure of one or both. She, whom I did not remember seeing before, is a little sharp-speaking woman, pretty, The other sister, left behind, fell in with me. We walked side by side and said : "I suppose you do not remember me,

She blushed extremely, glanced at such a time on such a spot! Yet what Treherne, and said, not without dignity, the foolish things I have uttered; espe-

> "I was not aware they were foolish: the impression left on me was that we had had a very pleasant conversation, which included far more sensible topics than are usually discussed at balls.

"You do not often go to balls?" " No." "Do you dislike them?"

" Not always."

Doctor Urquhart ?"

"Do you think they are wrong?" I smiled ather cross-questioning, which had something fresh and unsophisticated about it. like the inquisitiveness of a child considered the question; my going or not going, is purely a matter of individual choice. I went to the Cedars that night because Mrs. Granton was so kind is now being made which can never be as to wish it, and I was only too happy filled. to please her. 'I like her extremely, and owe her much.

"She is a very good woman," was the earnest answer. "And Colin has the kindest heart in the world."

I assented, though amused at the superlatives in which very young people delight; but, in this case, not so far away from truth as ordinarily happens.

"You know Colin Granton-have you een him lately—yesterday I mean? Did Captain Treherne see him yesterday?"

The anxiety with which the question was put reminded me of something Treherne had mentioned, which implied his rivalry with Granton; perhaps this kinding with such a feeling address, and such hearted damsel thought there would be a single-handed combat on our paradeground, between the accepted and rejected swains. I allayed her fears by observing that, to my certain knowledge, Mr. Granton had gone up to London on Mr. Granton had gone up to London on He could never compensate this Lodge Saturday morning, and would not return for the good he had received from being till Tuesday. Then, our eyes meeting, we both looked conscious; but, of course, neither the young lady nor myself made any allusion to present circumstances. I said, generally, that Granton was fine young fellow, not over sentimental. nor likely to feel anything very deeply cient to make an admirable country squire, and one of the best landlords in church-time, either toward me or in any the county, if only he could be brought to feel the importance of his position. "How do you mean?"

"His responsibility, as a man of forune, to make the most of his wealth.' "But how, what is there for him to

"Plenty, if he could only be got to do it.

"Could you not get him to do it? with another look of the eager eyes. "I? I know so very little of the

"But you have so much influence, hear, over everybody. That is, Mrs. I am confident I should have lost both Granton says. We have known the

From her blush, which seemed neces

It was easier to talk to a young girl ing forlorn by herself in a ball-room than to a grown-up lady, walking in broad daylight, accompanied by two other stylish fashionables as everirritated my sober vision. She did not, I must confess; she seemed to be the plain one of the family; unnoticed—one might almost guess, neglected. Nor was there any flightness or coquettishness in her nal, was quiet even to demureness. Pursuing my hobby of anatomizir character, I studied her a good deal dur ing the pauses of conversation, of which there was not a few. Compared with Treherne, whom I heard in advance, laughing and talking with his usual lightcommonly sombre and dull.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Leeburn.

COMPLIMENTARY SUPPER.—On Friday evening last the Leeburn Temple I. O. G. T., gave a complimentary supper and presentation to one of their members (Bro. Lawrason) on the eve of his departure from that point. The evening's entertainment consisted of a supper, speeches, vocal and instrumental music, and recitations, the programme being as follows, Bro. Cummings in the chair:—Quartette, "Good old Friends;" solo, Bro. H. Horton; speech, on agricultural interests, Bro. A. H. Clutton; duett, "Beautiful Gates," Sisters McManus; reading, "The Leap Year Proposal," Bro. S. B. Williams; "Our Lodge," Bro. W. H. Aborn; duett, Sisters McManus; reading, "The Yorkshireman," Bro. H. H. Clutton. One of a most popular COMPLIMENTARY SUPPER. -On Friday reading, "The Yorkshireman," Bro. H. H. Clutton. One of a most popular bachelors of the section was then called on to sing, but he had the proverbial "cold," owing to having travelled north. spell with his during the recent cold spell with his cold-water friend, the chairman. On pressure he gave in good style, "Home Again from a Foreign Shore," and be encored, brought down the house encored, brought down the house in "The Lone Starry Hours." The chairman said that he and the "Bachelor" had gone north together; that on onoccasion there was only one bed for both of them, that he (the chairman) took the outside, and the "Bachelor," being man of weight in the community, wa afraid the beadstead was too frail to support both, and decided to lay on the lounge, lengthened out with half a dozen chairs, to suit his elongated form. There were blankets and buffalo robes in profusion, but this fact did not hinder "It would be a pity to remember all sensitive bachelor from getting the cold the chairman caused roars of merrimen from the audience. A handsome walk ing staff was then presented to Bro. Lawrason, by Sister M. McManus, and Sister M. A. Clutton read the following

DEAR BROTHER LAWRASON — As you are about to leave us, we, the members of Leeburn Lodge, have met here to bid you farewell. Ever since you have be-come a member of this lodge you have been a most active worker for the cause of temperance, and also for the main-tenance of this lodge. As a slight evidence of the appreciation the members have had for your labors, we may say that you have been kept in office since the first quarter and during seven of the hild.

"Really, I have never very deeply a member, you have filled the highest filled. We hope the esteem in which you have been held while connected with the cause of temperance in this neighborhood will be an additional motive t you for continuing in the noble work, where ever you may be situated, and hope you will merit the same approbation We feel in losing you we are being deprived of one of our mainstays, but hope your gain will overbalance our loss Hoping that the remainder of your journey through life may be as pleasant and as prosperous as the few short years you have spent with us, we beg your acceptance of this cane which may serve to remind you of the happy evenings you spent at Leeburn Lodge No. 213, I. O. G. T.

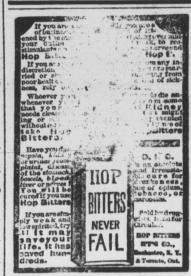

Bro. Lawrason thanked the brothers a good and ornamental staff, which he would ever keep in remem brance of the many pleasant associations which he had had with the brothers and sisters of the Leeburn Lodge. He said he had not merited such favors. Any thing he had done had been done with pleasure. a member of it. In the providence God, it had been the means of making a turning point in his life, lifting him up from the depths to the stature of a man, in which, in God's strength, he would remain and perform his vows until the end. He again with the deepest feeling thanked them for the gift and honor con-ferred, and hoped that, although far severed, we may always remain close in rendered some select pieces on the violin during the evening. A few closing re-marks by brother Linklater and the chairman were very amusing, the party then dispersed after singing "Old Lang then dispersed after singing "Old Syne," and "God Save the Queen.

The wife is the sun of the social sys tem. Unless she attracts, there is nothing to keep heavy bodies like hus-bands, from flying off into space.

"You Don't knew their Value."

"They cured me of Ague, Billiousness and Kidney Complaint, as recommended. I had a half bottle left which I used for my two little girls, whom the doctor and neighbors said could not be cured of them one night if I had not had the Hop Bitters in my house to use. I found they did them so much good I continued with them, and they are now well. That is why I say you do not know half the

NOTICE Giving up Pho And Frames to suit the above at BOTTOM PRICES. manner, which, though abrupt and origi-E. L. JOHNSON'S.

Pond's Extract

AB'

For The An'

She And T'w

had his his his to to to to to this who for gree for chu from con as ; the fatt and the with the ing a ; the con age con the con age con the contact and the contac

tro the tro sa ou at lid re wi

a ev see the model with will an extended the control of the contro

Controls all Hemorrhages, Venous

The Wonder of Healing.

HEYWOOD SMITH, M. D., M. R. C. P. &c., &c., &c., of the Hospital for Women in Soho square, London, writing to "The Lancet," under date of August 23, 1879, says: "POND'S Extract is a good preparation. In have used it for some time (ten to fifteen minims) with marked benefit in cases of passive uterine hemorrhage."

POND'S EXTRACT.

THE VEGETABLE PAIN DESTROYER DR. ARTHUR GUINNESS, F. R. C. S., of England, says: "I have prescribed POND'S EXTRACT for Hemorrhages of different kinds, for Hemorrhoids, and for affections of the eyes, and also Rheumatic inflammatory swelling of the joints, with great success."

Also supported by the following able physicians;

POND'S EXTRACT.

HEALING-COMFORTING.

DR. HERING, a physician of national reputation, says: "This medicine comprises the virtues of Aconite and Arnica, and con tains a tonic property which renders it im-mensely superior to both."

POND'S EXTRACT.

A RENOWNED MEDICINE. DR. A. E. SUMNER, of Brooklyn, N. Y., writes in the Medical Union: "Out. 130 cases of Egyptian Ophthalmia (disease the eye), 130 cases were cured by POND EXTRACT."

POND'S EXTRACT. USED ONCE-USED ALWAYS. DR. H. G. PRESTON, of Brooklyn, N.

CAUTION.

POND'S EXTRACT is sold only in bottle with the name blown in the glass, and ou landscape trade-mark on buff wrapper. AT It is unsafe to use other articles with our directions. Tasist on having POND'S EXTRACT. Refuse all imitations and substitutes. Prices of POND'S EXTRACT, 50c., $1.00 & $17

POND'S EXTRRACT 14 West 14th Street, New York Sold by all Druggists.

THE "ONLY" LUNG PAD

Cures by ABSORPTION (Nature's way.)

LUNG DISEASES. THROAT DISEASES, BREATHING TROUBLES.

It drives into the system curative agents and It draws from the diseased parts the pois

Thousands Testify to its Virtues. Sold by Druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of Price, $2.00, by

H. HASWELL & CO., Wholesale Druggists, and 150 McGill Street, Montreal, P. Q., General Agents for the Domi

GOLD FLAKE It is made absolutely pure and neatly packed in handy tin-foil packages. It is sold by all respectable dealers in all parts

Manufactured by
THE GLOBE TOBACCO CO., WINDSOR, ONE