What They Quarreled About.

By RUTH CAMERON.

HER CAMERON

"He had married in the glow of youth; he had had two years of clean and simple living, helping, quarrelling and the happy ending of quarrels."—H. G. Wells.

Someone read that aloud the other day. "It's a long time since we've quarrelled," said the Most-Recently-Wedded Lady, proudly. "Not since last July, is it dear?"

He thought a moment. "Yes," he said, reluctantly, "don't you remember that we had a pretty bad upset in August?"

Her face became grave. "Goodness, yes!" she said, "almost the worst we ever had."

"What on earth do you people ever find to quarrel about?" asked Molly.

He couldn't remember.

"Well, let me see," said the Most-Recently-Wedded Man. "What was it last time, Edith?"

She looked blank. "Now what was it?" she said.

They both thought a moment.

"I can't remember," she confessed.

"And I can't either," said he. "I can remember some of the foot things we hung at each other after we got started, but I can't remember what on earth started it."

"And yet," said the Most-Recently-Wedded Lady, still evidently searching in the recesses of her mind, "I do remember that I held out so long, because I felt it was a principle we disagreed about."

They Were Both Sure A Principle Was Involved.

"Yes," said the Most-Recently-Wedded Man, "I have that same feeling myself."

Of course, we all laughed and they, being young people rich in that blessed possession, a sense of humorous perspective, laughed too.

To quarrel about a principle, and not to remember three months afterwards what the principle was! Typical, isn't it?

They could remember the "foot things" they hung at each other after they got started. Yes, because these were the things that hurt.

The Unkind Things You Drag In.

Do you know, that's the worst part about quarrels, the grievances and the bitter accusations you dig up, out of your mind and your memory, and fling at each other.

"Yes, that's just like you, always thinking of yourself first," said she.

"Maybe I am," says he, "but I'd like to know who you were thinking when—" etc.

These are the things that leave the wounds.

If two young people would make up their minds not to drag miserable misadventures of this sort into their arguments, how much more often arguments would remain arguments, and not degenerate into quarrels.

What Are You Doing for that Eczema?

"Nothing," I've about given up trying to cure it."

"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylex and Zylex Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured. You can get Zylex at your druggists."

Zylex, 50c. a box; Zylex Soap, 25c. a cake.

Beck Says Allies Would Turn Against Us as Tensions Have—Foresees

James M. Beck, recently returned from a study of conditions in Europe, speaking on the 23rd ult., at the annual dinner of the Fifth Avenue Association at the Waldorf, said that this country tried to force a peace treaty that it would stand at the end of the war, hated by the Allies, and that the Central Powers, more, he uttered a warning that the United States was in danger of having to face, single-handed, groups of nations in titanic struggles, of which present war in Europe might be a beginning.

Mr. Beck pleaded for a united effort aroused to the need for dealing with other powers of the world on principle laid down by Washington. "Observe good faith and justice to all nations; cultivate peace and money with all." He called justice positive all affirmative force that involves active duties as well as pass rights, adding that between justice and injustice this country could remain neutral. He asked for a policy that would be hereafter "independent in all things, neutral in nothing," called on President Wilson in his administration to recognize this the tocsin of the American people.

Says We Have Lost Respect

"Few if any aspects of this crisis should give the thoughtful American greater concern than the attitude of other nations in this country," said Mr. Beck. "To practical Americans the judgment of the world may be a matter of indifference, but its more thoughtful citizens note the portentous possibilities involved in this changed attitude, one who has travelled in Europe, noting this world crisis can question fact that the United States no longer enjoys the respect and good-will of the world in the same measure heretofore."

"Those who affect indifference to this matter may well be reminded that in the very foundation of the United States, its great founders were assuredly men of vision, recognized in the very preamble of the constitution of independence that the cent respect to the opinions of the kind imposed upon this, as any moral responsibilities and practical obligations."

"It would serve no useful purpose this time to analyze the attitude
