

PRINCE ALBERT
the international joy smoke

YOU can't help cutting loose joy's remarks every time you flush your smokespot with Prince Albert—it hits you so fair and square. It's a scuttle full of jimmy pipe and cigarette makin' sunshine and as satisfying as it is delightful every hour of the twenty-four!

It's never too late to hop into the Prince Albert pleasure-pasture! For, P. A. is trigger-ready to give you more tobacco fun than you ever had in your smokecareer. That's because it has the quality.

Quick as you know Prince Albert you'll write it down that P. A. did not bite your tongue or parch your throat. And it never will! For, our exclusive patented process cuts out bite and parch. Try it for what ails your tongue!

Most Canadian dealers now sell Prince Albert in the tidy red tins. If your dealer does not handle it tell him to order through his jobber. Leading Canadian jobbers are now supplied.

Dramatic Thrills at the Casino Next Week

The thrill of full-blooded drama pervades the play which Gladys Klark and her company will on Monday next open an engagement of one week at the Casino Theatre. It is called Playthings, and it has created a veritable sensation everywhere it has been shown on account of its variety of life, the direct, straightforward method of its action, its setting forth truths which it is sometimes unpleasant, are none the less true, and its capacity for thrilling and astonishing even the most blasé theatre goer of the present generation.

The playwright has written what is frankly a melodrama, that is to say, is filled to the brim with incident and action, it has situations that startle and surprise and a climax that veritably brings its audience clutching their seats, but through the whole is woven an absorbing, consistent, sometimes pathetic story, one that teaches a lesson even amid the most salient climax of the performance.

The theme that Mr. Toler has chosen for elaboration is a dual one: Shall the woman who sins, not realizing that she is sinning be branded even as her scarlet sisters, must she consider her life irretrievably blighted, or may she bury the past and take her place in society as one purified by fire? And then, when her hand is sought in marriage by a good man, is her secret her own, or is she bound to tell him, the sad story of a mistake made through ignorance and for which she was very little to blame? Every person interested in one of the most vital problems of modern society will wish to see this play; it is the duty of every mother, every parent with a daughter, to see it.

"The Has-Beens."

Here they are—all in a row—defeated in the last election they line up now with Squires. The electors in the various districts for which they ran told them in no uncertain manner in 1913 that they were unworthy of their confidence, still they have the gall to change districts now in the hope that they are forgotten. But as the people handled them once, so they will again. They know these men are just hungry pirates anxious to get at the Government chest so safe in Cashin's charge, and their answer to these grafters on November 3rd will be "Away with them, away with them!"

Squires defeated in Trinity.
Carter defeated in Hr. Main.
Bartlett defeated in St. John's East.
Hartley defeated in Ferryland.
English defeated in St. George's.
Penney defeated in Carbonear.
Warren defeated in Port de Grave.
Of course this list of Squires-Cooker nominees is going to be lengthened considerably after Polling Day.

A War Veteran Writes.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir—The nomination of Mr. Carter for St. John's East has indeed struck home to the hearts of the people of that District, and to none has the blow been more hard than to the returned soldiers and sailors. To flaunt before us as a prospective representative, a person who, through all the trials and troubles of war—through all the appeals of patriotism—through all the cries of stricken comrades, schoolmates, and playmates—through all the calls of manhood—through the appeal of shame—stood quietly, smugly by and watched the drama of life, the bitter struggle for existence enacted before his eyes, is an unpardonable insult to a district that did "better than the best."

This is the person then, who, freedom assured by victory attained, stood buoyantly into the political arena to solicit the support of men his cowardly soul disdained to help; to dare ask a seat in the councils of a country he could not but would not fight for.

No greater insult could be heaped upon us.

We raved and shouted side by side, we filled the town with glee. And men came in from every side, some goodly stunts to see. I'm quite a thin cadaverous man with lean and hungry look. That plainly says: "Take what you can until you're brought to book. And if you are why look at me. My pockets well I've lined yet here I am supposed to be a model of mankind. At least that's what the Doc here says, and he's a cute old cuss. He cracks me up because it pays—that barrel's worth a fuss. We're twins although he's stout and fat, and I'm exceeding thin, and slick, too, you can bet on that, just watch how I can't win. The Doc here says he'll see me through—but doesn't say through what—I'm guessing if 'tis money, the Doc's a darn good shot. That barrel has a bottom, as barrel's always do, and God knows what will happen when the bottom shows up through. I'm thinking there's a wee bright spot, away from this dull town, and there, I'll lie to build a cot and seek no more renown, and sometimes in the days to come uncover memories lid, and hear them shouting SQUIRES WON. HE DID LIKE KELLY DID.

S. E. GARLAND.

The Re-Creation of Brian Kent (Harold Bell Wright.) A novel of love in the Ozarks is beautiful and appealing in its pathos and teeming with local colour of "The Shepherd of the Hills" country. The book full to the brim with philosophy, delightful in description, masterful in character portrayal, tense with dramatic action. All the characters, Brian Kent, Auntie Sue, Judy and Betty Go, are not mere creations emanating from an author's imagination, they are actual living beings. There are thrilling incidents related with such vivid realism that one reads with breathless interest. And yet the fascinating power of the book is more in perfect analysis of humanity and in the skillful visualization of the clash and conflicts of life's visible forces out of which the thrilling incidents come. The book is on the whole, a book written by the author of "The Shepherd of the Hills," which is surely saying enough.

"A Labrador Spring" (Charles W. Townsend, M.D.) This book is one of especial interest to Newfoundlanders on account of the ever unsettled question of the Labrador. The book gives an ideal description of the various parts of Labrador, paying special attention to the flora and fauna of the district. The book is profusely illustrated with actual photos taken on the spot by Dr. Townsend who has a large amount of praise for that great country—Labrador. The book is to be congratulated on the fact that he purchased all the publisher's stock of the edition. The book is one we could easily recommend as a giftbook to any intelligent man interested in his country.

G. KNOWLING, LTD.
The Cosmopolitan for October is an excellent copy of an excellent magazine. This month's edition will be of interest to all. The principal items appear below:

Plans—A very beautiful poem by Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

A new novel by Peter B. Kyne, "Kindred of the Dust," is the principal feature. This story promises to be very good.

"Number, Please!"—An adventure in the telephonic art by Rupert Hughes.

The fourteenth chapter of "Uneasy Street," a novel of New York, by Arthur Somers Roche.

"Oriental Tribulations"—Some observations by Kenneth L. Roberts, who was in Siberia with American forces and who knows what he is talking about.

"The Crimson Tide"—A new novel in a new vein, by Robert W. Chambers, speaks for itself.

And last, but not least, a thrilling story of the Great Outdoors, by James Oliver Curwood, called The Deluge.

Sagona Back From North.

Reports Loss of Several Vessels.

S. S. Sagona, Capt. Parsons, arrived in port from Labrador at two o'clock this morning, having been as far North as Nain. The Captain reports a very severe gale from N. E., accompanied by snow, which raged from the evening of September 30th until the evening of October 2nd. During this storm the Sagona was anchored at "Run by Guess," and rode it without damage. However, a number of vessels were not so fortunate, becoming lost, and others considerably damaged. At Indian Tickle Templemen's new fish carrier, which was there to load, broke from her moorings and became a total loss. The banker Rita M. Cluett, of Belleoram, also dragged and became a total wreck. A banker belonging to Harris of Grand Bank, Fitzgerald's schooner, "Star of the Sea," and another banker also were broken to pieces. Hickman's fish carrier with 3,200 qds. of cod on board, also was wrecked. Five schooners at that time in the Tickle, escaped unscathed. At Sand Banks a schooner of Hon. P. Templeman's and one of A. H. Murray's went ashore. The former became a total loss, while the latter was refloated and now lies at Dominio. Hiscock's schooner at Smokey also went ashore during the storm, being later refloated without sustaining damage. Two schooners are reported as having been lost at Little Holton, one owned by G. and M. Gosse, and the other by the Gorton Pew Fisheries Co. The three banking crews lost all belongings, and barely escaped with their lives. Not a single life was lost during the storm, which was one of the most severe ever felt on Labrador at such a late date. The fishery for the shoremen will be an average one, Capt. Parsons reports, and better than an average one for the fishers. As a consequence of the late making, many of the fishermen will be late in getting home.
