"Reg'lar Fellers"

British Seamen's Pluck.

An example of the enduring courage of the British seamen of the seventeenth century is supplied by the story of the "Antelope," a tiny Admiralty packet boat, built for speed, not fighting, mounting only six guns—three-pounders, about the size of a blunderbuss—and having a crew of 21 men fit for service. The "Antelope," on December 1, 1793, was three days out with mails from Port Royal, Jamaica, when two French privateers sighted her, and at once bore up in pursuit. For two days the "Antelope" ran before her pursuers. She outlasted one completely, but the wind falling, the remaining privateer—the "Atalanta"—crept up by the aid of sweeps and opened fire. The courageous little "Antelope" made such venomous use of her pocket battery that her big antagonist drew off, but after a night's reflection, the Frenchmen in the early morning, came resolutely on again, boarded the "Antelope," and a desperate fight raged on its narrow decks. All the officers of the packet boat fell, but the boatswain—Mr. Pasco—took command; a midshipman—one of the "Antelope's" passengers—stood at the helm armed with a pike and musket, and alternately steered the ship and joined in furious assaults on the French boarders. The stubborn fight had lasted more than two hours, when the privateer finally tried to sheer off, cutting the grapples by which it held the packet boat. Out of the 65 men who composed the crew of the privateer, 32, including the captain and first lieutenant, lay slain, and 17 were wounded. The 21 men of the "Antelope" had thus slain or wounded more than double their own number of the enemy. When the privateer attempted to sheer off, the boatswain, the midshipman passengers, and the scanty survivors of the packet, tumbling furiously over the Frenchman's bulwarks, fought their way across its deck, encumbered with slain and mangled under its flag in triumph. The "Antelope" carried off its prize—an ant escorting a beetle—to Jamaica. The delighted House of Assembly there immediately directed that five hundred guineas should be divided among her crew. The Frenchmen had fought till two out of every three of their whole number had fallen; but the cool, obstinate, long-enduring pluck of the "Antelope's" crew represents the quality which makes intelligible the naval triumphs won by the British seamen of that day and handed down to their successors of the present day.

Concrete Ships a Huge Success.

The Faith Has Sailed the Atlantic and Pacific Without a Mishap.

Unmindful of war or peace, strikes or storms, the reinforced concrete ship "Faith" continues on her even way, plying the waves of every ocean. No sea too rough, no gale too high, for this sturdy 20th century marvel.

For her maiden voyage Faith took a taste of the Pacific, going from San Francisco, the city of her birth, to Vancouver; thence back home and to the Panama Canal. Forty and sixty-mile Pacific gales failed to ruffle her seams. Having thus convinced all doubters of her seaworthiness Faith slid up to New York where she blushing received the homage of innumerable admirers.

Getting back into her element she betook herself to South American waters and upon her return set sail for England. While there she was again minutely examined for lines of care and distress but in vain. Her captain said that in all his thirty-five years' experience of life on the ocean waves, he has not met with any boat to equal this one. And her owners said "It is needless for us to say that the boat took not an inch of water as she is one of the staunchest sea-boats afloat."

Now the Faith has returned home in quest of new glories. It is said she will soon be on her way to a new distant continent. Wherever she goes, the "Faith" delivers the goods.

H. A. McKinnon Hasn't Felt So Well in 30 Years.

Provincial Constable is Full of Life and Energy Since Taking Tanlac.

Most everybody in Nova Scotia has either known or has heard of M. A. McKinnon, of 50 Falkland street, Halifax. Mr. McKinnon has lived in Halifax county for thirty years or more, was one time Chief of Police of Lunenburg and has been Provincial Constable for the past twelve years.

Mr. McKinnon called at Kinley's drug store in Halifax recently and made a statement regarding the benefits he has derived from the use of Tanlac, that will be of interest throughout the province. Here is what he said:

"Well, I have been taking your Tanlac now for about four weeks, have just finished my third bottle, and I don't believe I have felt so well in thirty years. I have not only gotten rid of a case of stomach trouble that made life miserable for me for a long time, but I have already gained ten pounds in weight. Tanlac is the only medicine I have found that does what they say it will and I am glad to make a statement to be used in letting others know about it."

"I lost my appetite two years ago and even a little piece of toast and a cup of tea, which was all I could eat for breakfast, disagreed with me. In fact I could not eat anything at any time, no matter how light, without suffering from indigestion. There was a feeling in the pit of my stomach like a heavy lump. I would simply have to fight for breath and was drawn almost double at times with cramping pains. I was simply in misery for hours after every meal. I was also habitually constipated and had the worst kind of headaches most every day, especially in the mornings. I could never sleep well at night on account of the gas and pain in my stomach and would get up in the morning feeling tired and sluggish and with no energy. Well, it just seemed that I suffered with nearly everything a man with a bad stomach could have."

"I was losing weight continually. Why, just before I began taking Tanlac I had one of my suits altered because I had fallen off until it was too large for me, but I guess I made a mistake for at the rate I'm now gaining I'll soon get all my lost weight back. I had read and heard enough about Tanlac to convince me that it was good, but I had no idea it was so fine until I began taking it. There's not a doubt in my mind now but what it is the greatest medicine ever sold in a drug store for any sort of stomach trouble. My appetite is so good now that I can eat hardy enough to eat, and my stomach is in such a good condition that I can eat just anything put on the table and never feel a sign of indigestion. All that sourness, gas, pain, and shortness of breath is entirely gone. I sleep soundly at night and get up mornings feeling thoroughly rested and as full of life and energy as a two-year old. There is no getting away from the fact that Tanlac is what brought about this wonderful change and I can't recommend it too highly."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative; in Harbord Street, by Thos. Walsby & Sons; in Placentia by James Murphy & Son; and in Topsail, by J. K. Bursell.

Oldest Tune in the World.

"For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," is said to be the oldest tune in the world. The origin of the air is lost in antiquity but it is supposed to have been learned from the ancient Babylonians by the Egyptians, who popularized it in Africa, and Asia Minor. Arabs still sing it. The Crusaders caught the tune from their Saracen enemies, and sang it under the walls of Jerusalem. The air was ultimately carried into Europe where it survived, in various forms, among the folksongs of the different nations. In 1709, after the defeat at Malplaquet, the French, following a false rumor of the Duke of Marlborough's death in battle, composed a satiric lament, "Malbrook is Off to the War." Like most topical songs, this one was of short-lived popularity, but in 1781 it suddenly echoed from one end of France to the other. The young Marie Antoinette gave birth to an heir, and the baby Prince's nurse used to put her royal charge to sleep, with the old song of her village home, and as it by magic the song became the craze of the day.

Danced Six Times

WITH THE PRINCE AND SAT WITH HIM AT THE FOLLIES.

Prince of Wales on his return from West Point to-day had dinner on H. M. S. Renown, Brigadier-General and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Miss Grace Vanderbilt, Mr. Clarence H. MacKay, Miss Katherine MacKay, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Rogers, Miss Millie Rogers and others were present. It became known late last night, after the name of Miss Rogers had been found in a partial list of those who were to attend the dinner, that the Prince had personally sent invitations to Miss Rogers and her parents in the morning. They had not been included in the list.

Miss Rogers is the young woman with whom the Prince danced six times on Wednesday night at the home of Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, and in whose company he has been on several occasions since his visit to Washington and White Sulphur Spring, W. Va. Society was much interested yesterday in learning all of the details of the Prince's attention to Miss Rogers at the ball on Wednesday night.

The Prince attended the Follies in the evening. Those who had noticed that during the first part of the performance the woman in the Prince's box had been beckoning behind their fans to Miss Rogers, who sat across the house, saw Miss Rogers leave her place and make her way to the Prince's box. She was accompanied there by Miss Grace Vanderbilt, who then sat to the right of the Prince, with Miss Rogers to the left. During the performance the Prince showed all of the accepted signs of being "regular" having a "regular" time.

The King's Wish

A King, who lived long, long ago, wanted a clock that would keep good time, so he sent for the best clockmaker he knew, and gave him his orders.

When the clockmaker brought work to the King, His Majesty said that the figures on the face were wrong.

The clockmaker couldn't see the mistake but the king declared that the four (IV) should be four (IIII). The clockmaker felt sure he was right, and started to argue with it. But the king got ever so angry and ordered the man to take the clock home and alter the mistake.

Of course, the clockmaker had to do as the king told him; but the clock still continues.

the Profiteer and Pay the Soldier."

Evening Telegram.

Sir:—I heartily endorse all that has been said by the various on the question of Soldiers Gratuities; and consider right and fair that an increase commensurate to the time and difficulties which we have lost be made.

A maximum sum paid to a soldier at present is four hundred twenty dollars (420.00). On a basis that would not be so under existing conditions, worth so very much after all, the left home, twenty-five dollars ($25.00) would buy a very good pair of boots or overcoat and four dollars ($4.00) a pair of boots. Now, these articles are just about five times the price. The purchase value of a dollar has thus considerably diminished; so that, on a basis, our four hundred and twenty dollars is equivalent to about ninety dollars and fifty. And this is the position received from a gratuity by men who, in many cases, have given over four of the best years of their lives, and under the possible conditions, to the humanity.

The soldiers and sailors were the water doing their best to hold flag flying and maintain positions of the race, there were many in Newfoundland waxing by reason of the protection by that line of khaki and depending from the Channel to the North Sea.

There was an economic well as a military side to it. We do not assert that these would have been in France. But we do assert: is that the profits made during the years by most of those who are willing to sell are hardly commensurate with the standard of patriotism by those men who now Gallipoli, France and Flanders.

Common knowledge that since the selling price of goods has always been governed by its cost but rather by the price in the outside market, a piece of common sense, which the buyer to sell at forty per cent profit was eventually reduced to one dollar and ten cents. And in this manner a large amount of war-time profits can be accounted for. This is probably the reason, but we fail to see the point.

Right here, Mr. Editor, lies the point from which the soldiers and sailors can and should be paid.

It led to believe that, because turned it down, there is not chance of our obtaining any necessary increase of tax. But Canada's reason was not borne by the people, is, however, absolutely right, there should be any increase in public taxation; and the soldiers and sailors are the last of those that there should be much use receiving money and paying it out with.

Mr. The Profiteer can and may, in brief: Tax the Profiteer, pay the Soldier. Only right and just that those who have made money and increased their wealth should pay the cost of the war.

But the profiteer can and may, in brief: Tax the Profiteer, pay the Soldier. Only right and just that those who have made money and increased their wealth should pay the cost of the war.
