Finish the Job.

How you start is important, very important, but in the end it is how you finish that counts.

The victor in the race is not the one who dashes off swiftest but the one who leads at the finish.

In the race for success, speed is less than stamina.

Columbus finished his job. So did Washington. So did Lincoln.

Look around to-day.

H. C. Frick, whose recently-published will constitutes one of the noblest documents of America's annals, won because he refused to quit when, engulfed by the panic of '73, his associates and others engaged in the infant coke industry, showed the white feather and gave up.

Andrew Carnegie earned most of his fortune by boldly buying out discouraged partners who lost their nerve and their stick-to-it-iveness.

John D. Rockefeller held on grimly and resolutely when others lost their faith in so mercurial and uncertain a commodity as oil, with its frequent disasters from fire.

Convocation of Canterbury.

The Convocation of the Province of Canterbury opened February 10th in the Church House, following the customary celebration of Holy Communion in the Chapel of King Henry VII in Westminster Abbey. When the Upper House assembled, the President and Bishops proceeded to the Great Hall, where His Grace addressed the two Houses on the subject of the Church in Wales and the formation of the National Assembly of the Church of England. The Archbishop of York was present as a guest.

When the President and Bishops returned to the Upper House, the subject of the Church in Wales and the formation of a Welsh Province was discussed.

In the Lower House, Dr. Temple introduced the report of the Joint Committee on the Ministry of Women, and moved the first resolution appended to the report:—

"That in view of the Apostolic teaching that women, equally with men, are members of One Body of Christ, and partakers of the Holy Spirit, and in order that fuller use may be made of the Church's service of the gifts and experience of women, this House make the following recommendation:—

"That under conditions laid down by the Bishop of the diocese it should be permissible for women duly qualified and approved by him to speak and pray in consecrated buildings at services or meetings for prayer or instruction other than the regular and appointed services of the Church."

But it would seem that the statements of St. Paul and the uniform practice of the Church in the past were of greater importance to the majority of Proctors than the exigencies of the present, and after much discussion and several divisions the resolution was defeated by 46 votes to 45.

On February 11th, in the Upper House, the President introduced the subjects of Clerical Poverty and the Famine in Europe, which were discussed. The Bishop of Gloucester introduced reports Nos. 527 and 528 on drafting the proposal for the revision of the Book of Common Prayer.

When the Shah Saw Radium.

Radium—most mysterious of the mysteries of modern science—is so little familiar to unscientific men that the panic of the Oriental mentioned here is easily understood.

Once, while in Paris, the Shah of Persia expressed a wish to know something of the discovery made by the Curies, husband and wife, famous as the discoverers of radium. The French authorities made the necessary arrangements. Complete darkness is of course needed if radium is to reveal itself in all its brilliancy. After endless trouble the authorities finally persuaded the monarch to descend into one of the hotel cellars that had been arranged for the purpose, and His Majesty, with all his suite, proceeded to the underground apartment. Professor Curie closed the door, switched off the electric light, and uncovered his specimen of radium. A shout of terror between the roar of a lion and the yell of a man being murdered rang out, and was echoed by a hundred others.

Amid general excitement and consternation, the French authorities hastened to the electric switches, and turned on the lights. Then they beheld a strange spectacle. In the midst of the prostrate Persians, with his arms around the neck of his grand vizier, and his round pupils dilated to their very rims, stood the Shah, shouting at the top of his voice in Persian:

"Come away! Come away!"

The switching on of the light calmed his mad terror as if by magic. Realizing the disappointment and chagrin he had caused Monsieur Curie, the Shah tried to recompense him by the offer of a decoration. But the austere man of science declined it.

Finishing the job isn't always easy. Very often the easiest thing would be to quit. We all are tempted to succumb to difficulties, discouragements, failures, hardships, disasters. We all have moments when we feel, "What's the use?"

But if we are made of firm stuff, if we have the backbone of a man and not a jelly-fish, if we have confidence in ourselves and faith in God, if we know that we are giving our lives to a clean, worthy, healthy, helpful purpose, we grit our teeth a little harder, we face East, eyes front, and with unflinching step push forward determined to halt not and whimper not until we finally gain our goal.
