PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

A Journal of a Visit to the South Coast of Newfoundland.

March 16th.—This day did leave with Povey by train, for Argentia, being called with great suddenness to make a journey to the South Coast about the business of our office. Indeed, I did have so little notice that I had scarce time to pack my clothes, and all due to that rascal Povey, he having fair warning of that we must leave to-day, yet told me naught of it till last night. My wife in a great ado about my departure and to bid me farewell with many tears and protestations. The journey to Argentia a mighty pleasant one, being greatly enlivened by the presence on the train of Mr. Wallace, the famous comedian, who did keep us in the highest spirits by his many quips. Going on board the good ship "Portia," did learn how Mr. C. White, that is her popular purser, was married yesterday, and so to offer him my congratulations, in which all with me did join. Coming to Buria early on St. Patrick's morn, we attend with much ceremony, to the dipping of the Shamrocks, having a small bunch of these with us, and so to the inn of Mrs. Burgess, and to bed.

March 17th. (St. Patrick's Day)—Up betimes, did take a walk about the place with Povey, and renewed divers old acquaintances, to my great content, being much good discourse and merriment. In the afternoon, with Povey, to see played in the Parish Hall "When a Fellow Needs a Friend," mighty good. At night, being a real old time dance, Povey and I there, but he dances such as I am not accustomed to and did baffle me to do well, albeit I take pride in myself in being a mighty good performer. So back to our inn where Mr. Wallace, playing the piano, entertains us right merrily.

March 18th.—Povey and I this day about our business, which keeps us busy till dark. The weather fine, so we abroad in a motor boat and feel no discomfort from it. This night to Mr. Bartlett's house where we play at forty-fives and do listen also to concerts from Boston that come over the radio.

March 19th.—Busy all this day, and so to the inn of Mrs. Burgess, and to bed.

March 20th.—Up betimes, did take a walk about the place with Povey, and renewed divers old acquaintances, to my great content, being much good discourse and merriment. In the afternoon, with Povey, to see played in the Parish Hall "When a Fellow Needs a Friend," mighty good. At night, being a real old time dance, Povey and I there, but he dances such as I am not accustomed to and did baffle me to do well, albeit I take pride in myself in being a mighty good performer. So back to our inn where Mr. Wallace, playing the piano, entertains us right merrily.

March 21st.—Povey and I this day about our business, which keeps us busy till dark. The weather fine, so we abroad in a motor boat and feel no discomfort from it. This night to Mr. Bartlett's house where we play at forty-fives and do listen also to concerts from Boston that come over the radio.

March 22nd.—Up betimes, and at breakfast do meet with Mr. Burgess, that is the Magistrate for this Bay, he having boarded the ship at Harbour Mill. We do discourse at some length, and he tells me how great a boon to Fortune Bay is the service which the Glencoe renders, and highly thought of by the people that the Government should show them so much consideration. He tells me much concerning the difficulties of travelling that he do experience in his work and is, indeed, an interesting talker. This afternoon we come at last to Bellefleur, and do find there, on the wharf, Mr. Halfyard, and he rightly glad to see us and accompanied us to the inn of Mrs. Skene where we do reside while in the town. This night Mr. Scott comes to see us, and Mr. Davies, the rector, also, and much pleasant discourse before retiring.

March 23rd.—Povey and I up and about our business, which keeps us most of the day, and do have much interesting talk with divers old friends that do include Messrs. Burdock, Fudge, Kearley and Whitley. This evening Mr. Burdock gives us to our tea, some fresh cream from his own farm and some bakewells, which we did greatly enjoy. At night, Mr. Wallace being with us, we did play at bridge and I did fare very badly, yet not so much as to cause me worry.

March 24th.—This day, to the beach, and do see the great fish dryer which Messrs. Harvey & Co. did erect last autumn. Indeed, a fine plant, and great things hoped from it. I do learn, among other things, how there is a steam trawler expected soon at Bellefleur and will fish the Banks from there. This night, Povey and I to Mr. Oakley's house, but are not there long when the Portia arrives; so we to make haste to board her, and settle ourselves away for the night, which we pass at St. Jacques. I did spend most of the night reading some letters from my wife, which do tell me how lonely she is. Yet, at the same time, speaks of her playing at bridge high every afternoon and night since I left her. But what maddens me is that she did go to the St. Patrick's night dance with Briggs, who is a fellow I greatly dislike, and must write her that she must see no more of him.

March 25th.—Up betimes, and coming on deck, do find the ship is in Grand Bank stream, and the wind blowing from the north east, is impossible to make the pier. So the Portia coming to anchor, Povey and I to go aboard Mr. Foot's motor boat with the greatest difficulty, owing to the pitching of the vessel. Coming ashore, do meet with Mr. Alderdice, he going home, and do bid him see my wife and give her my love, which he promises to do for me. So to our inn, and then abroad to Bill Matthews, the barber, and to have myself trimmed, which he does mightily well, better even than I could do it myself. Buy all this day, and at night, at Capt. Pierce's bidding, to the Club, which is just opened, and a mighty cheerful place, with much good company. I do meet there many of my old friends, and did talk with them all of divers matters of public interest.

March 26th.—Up betimes, and abroad about my business. Among other things do make enquiries of the banking vessels, and the most of them now in the Bay seeking harbour for bait. This year there are 18 bankers out from Grand Bank alone, and some smaller vessels also, which is more than there have been these many years. Indeed, there are the highest hopes of a good fishery, which I do trust will be upheld.

March 27th.—Povey and I about the conclusion of our business which keeps us busy all the day. By despatches out of St. John's, I do learn how Sir J. C. Crobie did present the estimates for the next fiscal year, and show an increase of some four hundred thousand dollars, half of which is the interest on the loan raised last year. This day some vessels do return from English Harbour, where they did get their supplies of bait and seems as if all the bankers will soon be out fishing. Smoking a cigarette this night, I did burn a small hole in the knee of my new trousers, which troubles me greatly, being that I may ill afford a new pair.

March 28th.—Up betimes, and with Povey, by coach to Fortune, the road in the worst possible condition and the journey mighty uncomfortable. So to see Mr. H. Lake and he gives me to read the latest papers from St. John's, which do interest me greatly. Anon meeting Mr. P. Lake, he tells me how he has many enquiries concerning his canned fresh codfish, and among them some from New York, Haiti and Australia. I did advise him to send some samples to the Nid. exhibit at Wembley, being a good article and this the best means of making it known. Anon to wait on Mr. Spencer, who discourses with me of divers affairs, to my great content. This night, to the Club, where good company and a right pleasant evening. So home and to bed.

"Let's see what you have in your pockets, Jimmy."

My small son, after lodging his protest, reluctantly did as I requested. And this is what he had been carrying about with him:

1 Penknife.
 1 Piece of String.
 1 Bar of Chewing-Gum.
 3 "Conkers."
 2 Pieces of Toffee.
 1 Nail.
 20 Cigarette Pictures.
 1 Piece of Elastic.

10 Foreign Stamps.
 1 100,000 German Mark Note.
 The End of a Collar Stud.
 A Fish Hook.
 1 Box of Matches.
 When I had made a list of them, he asked me to turn out my pockets.

After a moment's hesitation I gave way. And this is what I produced:

1 Fountain Pen.
 1 Season-Ticket Case.
 1 Pipe.
 20 Cigarettes.
 2 Boxes of Matches.
 A Pencil and Pocket-Book.
 A Time-Table.
 2 Bunches of Keys.
 10 Pennies.
 5 Shillingsworth of Silver.
 A Purse.
 A Watch.
 A Handkerchief.
 A Handkerchief.

Quite naturally, Jimmy wouldn't rest until mother had emptied her hand-bag on to the table. Her list was:

1 Purse.
 1 Handkerchief.
 3 Hair-Pins.
 5 Bills (all paid, thank goodness!)
 2 Letters.
 1 Mirror.
 2 Safety-Pins.
 1 Comb.
 Pencil and Notebook.

From this I concluded that I was a human pantomime. For about half of the contents of my wallet could have been left at home; one box of matches would have been sufficient; the time-table was unnecessary, as the trains run about every half-hour; a most of the keys I never used.

Jimmy vowed that every item in his list was vital to his existence. The nail, for instance, was used to make the hole in his conkers.

The Bee's Business

A bee weighs only 1-300th part of an ounce, so the weight of the load it carries back to its hive must necessarily be small—probably not more than 1-1, 250th part of an ounce, or little more than a quarter of the bee's weight.

This means that in order to gather one pound of nectar the bee must make 250,000 journeys out and home. But this is not all profit to the bee. Nectar is only half honey, so that the production of a pound of pure honey requires 40,000 journeys.

What would you reckon an average trip for a bee? A low estimate would certainly give a quarter of a mile each way, or, out and home, half a mile. In that case it is easy to see that a bee must fly 20,000 miles to gather the raw material for a pound of honey. This is equal to 1,850 miles per ounce. Yes, the bee is a great hustler—and when he has done his job, he gets robbed of all his takings!

So convenient and effective for sore throat

With gargles or sprays it is impossible to keep a sore throat under anything like continuous treatment. With Formamint, it makes no difference where you are, at work, in crowded car, shop, theatre or church, you can dissolve one of these delicious, almost candy-like, tablets in your mouth once an hour or so. A effective yet harmless antiseptic is released and, carried by the saliva, continuously bathes the entire lining of the mouth and throat, checks germ growth, and gives the sore, infected tissues chance to heal.

Formamint tablets used when especially exposed to infection reduce your danger of catching sore throats, and even influenza, from others.

Children can—and should—use them freely as defence against throat affections and influenza which spread so readily in congested school-rooms.
