The Mesmeric Experiment.

Some excitement and curiosity was manifested as to the result of the experiment begun by Miss de Montford at her entertainment on Friday night, when she placed three men under an irresistible mesmeric obligation to bring certain articles to her on Saturday night at ten minutes past eight. A crowd gathered in the Market Square near the town hall doors before the hour. Two of the subjects—the painter and the plasterer—made their appearance punctually, carrying a cat and a bag of boots respectively. Efforts were made to stop them by some rowdies present. The plasterer struck out, with the boot-sack, and the painter lost his cat in the melec, but after a struggle both succeeded in getting into the hall, and rushed on the platform amid the cheers of the audience. The weaver came on shortly afterwards. He had been mesmerised by another person during the day, which had interfered with Miss de Montford's influence; but not-withstanding this he went into a semi-The Annual Meeting of the Mechanics' institute for the Election of Officers for the present year will be held in the Town Hall, on TUESDAY EVENING, JANUARY 31th.
