FREDERICTOR, N. B., November 23, 1887.

A Board of Trade. Down in St. John, they have as organization they call the " Board of Trade," though for what reason we have never been able to make out. It is composed mostly of rabid politicians, some of whom are in Parliament while others want to get there Every Saturday afternoon these gentlemen with three or four business men, get together and discuss the destiny of this country with a zeal worthy of better results. A gentleman by the name of Harding seems to be one of the ruling spirits at the "Board." and competes very successfully with the politicians in the talking line. Recently these gentlemen have been dispassing Commercial Union, and some remarks of a party named Schofield were ridicaled by the Sun in a good natured way. At this, however, Mr. Schofield took offence, and at Saturday's meeting of the "Board" he complained, and threatened to have the Sun reporters boycotted if they made fun of him. We advise the Sun to follow this gentleman with its satire. I would be the most practical way of dissolving the " Board," which apparently serves no better purpose than advertising its half dozen attendants. Let the newspapers be boycotted by Mr. Schofield, and these Saturday harangues will soon be no more. It is the publicity given their speeches that responsible duties, there is no reason why they should bore the public ear suitability of St. John for a winter tical friends, but to the British nation, and is the St. John Sun has retired from the manwith the alleged disastrous state of port?" the country, which alleged disastrous sweets of office. Mr. Robertson's majority over General Laurie in February last was only thirty-one, but then there was some uncertainty as to whether the Government would be sustained at the polls. The electors of Shelburne at least were told this by Mr. Robertson and his party, and the canvas, of course, Blake would win and that he (Robertsop) would be a Cabinet Minister in ernment is installed for another five years, and it is quite likely that Shelburne will prefer to have a friend like General Laurie at court, than a political nobody like Robertson.

The significance of the Haldimand election is so manifest that the leaders of the Liberal party, ordinarily slow to appreciate the bent of popular opinion, have been quick to comed by Mr. Wiman and accepted by the pro-vincial conference, Sir Richard Cartwright, Mr. Charlton and the Globe, was the prominent issue before the electors, and no more the project could have been found. The ency had for half a century remained true to the Liberal party; its candidate was unexceptional; bordering on the frontier, any advantages likely to accrue from the ppening of the American market to Canadian produce would be largely reaped by the county; the population is almost wholly agricultural: and the scheme was commended with all the skill and eloquence of tried campaigners like Sir Richard Cartwright, Mr. aterson (of Brant) and Mr. Charlton. Defeat under such circumstances is so plain a declaration that the Canadian people

WILL NOT ACCEPT COMMERCIAL UNION that the party leaders have already turned tail on Mr. Wiman and are seeking an escape rom the awkward dilemna in which a too ready acquiesence in his fad has placed them. Two days after Commercial Union was rejected by the electors of Haldimand, Mr. J. Edgar, M. P., the Man-Friday of the Opposition, wrote an open letter to Mr. Wiman. he meaning of which is too obvious to be lost by the most casual reader. It is a richly morous letter in its way. Notwithstanding all the speeches and writings of the father of the movement, of Mr. Goldwin Smith, and Sir Richard Cartwright and Mr. Charlton, and Mr. Fuller, and the Globe and he innumerable lesser lights who have unolded the beauties of Commercial Union, Mr. Edgar has only now suddenly discovered that "there is considerable confusion of ideas as to one important aspect of the question." What the elaborate arguments, explanations and statements of the Liberal press and politicians and of Mr. Wiman did not cause, the Haldimand election has with remarkable alacrity produced, and we have MR. EDGAR WRITING TO WIMAN The advocates of Commercial Union have made frequent use of an expression which has been seized upon by opponents as disclosing a fatal objection to the scheme. We are often told that unrestricted reciprocity would sweep away all the customs uses upon the frontier. If that were to be done, it seems clear, for several reasons, that ve would have to agree upon a uniform customs tariff with the United States against the est of the world. In other words, the entire tariff legislation of both countries would brought to a standstill during the duration of the treaty, and it is scarcely conceivable that either Canada or the United States could arrive at a satisfactory uniform tariff o last for that period."
