Thomas Kane, nowslying under sentence of death, still maintains his indifferent de-meanor. He prefers death on the scaffold to meanor. He prefers death on the scaffold to life imprisonment, and in conversation with Sheriff's Officers McCormack and Hull he said: "I would rather be hanged at once than be imprisoned for life. I am not the first innocent man who has been hanged and probably won't be the last." He says that the neighbors were all against him and that they murdered Mary Kane ii order that he should be accused of the erime. He complains that the witnesses produced for the prosecution did not tell the truth.
