BRIDGETOWN, MAY 17, 1876.

THE POET WHITTIER.

The Centennial is an event which inflames curiosity, excites minds, touches hearts and inspires music; and no doubt it will add a few choice specimens to the literature of the day.

Mr. Whittier is a Quaker, and for many years has been aggrandizing the literary reputation of his country, and making it manifest that a warm heart, a flowing fancy, and a capacity to add sparkling gems to the expanding literature of America, may be found beneath a broad brim, and be appreciated by the social religious brotherhood to which he belongs.

The "Quaker Poet," in the moral elements and religious tendencies of his nature, is so removed from those gross sensualities which too often have debased other versifiers, that the most fastidious censor would find to find anything objectionable in all that Whittier has ever written.

With the better feelings, instincts, passions and propensities of our common nature Whittier seems peculiarly familiar, and no one can touch with more gently stirring effect the sexual affections than does he.

These crude and disjointed remarks have been called forth by the admirable "Centennial Hymn" by Whittier, which is on our first page. Though it is not one of the author's happiest poetical productions, it is admirably suited to the occasion, and will awaken a response in the national heart of a people, who are celebrating the centenary of a republican empire.

We fear, however, that many of our readers feel little interest in the Centennial, and have a scant relish for a poem that seems designed merely to throng the hearer with the thousand-voiced choir at Philadelphia.

and occupy their leisure hours in the occasional reading of poetry. We do not mean by poetry the jingling rhymes and versified mawkish sentimentalities which too frequently occupy a corner in newspapers; but we mean the works of men of genuine genius, who were born to the semi-prophetic vocation of uttering exalted thoughts and aspirations which have their birth in minds that have higher, deeper, and broader views of the material world of the human heart—and of all things which are recognized by the eye, or grasped by the imagination, than have ordinary minds.

The confession of Piper, the murderer of Mabel Young—which the Herald announced yesterday in advance of the papers,—comes upon the public with startling effect. On the very eve of his confession a motion had been made for a new trial, and the public eye was attracted to a letter filled with protestations of his innocence. It was a letter rich in Scriptural reminiscence, abounding in pious quotations, and exhibiting a bold position on the ground that he had endeavored, in his cowardice, to escape the charge of murder by a falsehood. This feeble defence failed. Yet it is to be admitted that the circumstantial evidence against Piper was not sufficient to convince the public of his guilt. If he had been hanged without declaring his innocence the people might have supposed him to be the victim of a mistake. But, happily, any doubts of the kind are extinguished. The man has not only confessed that he murdered Mabel Young in the beffy, but that he was the assistant of Mary Tyler and also the murderer of Bridget Landreau.

There can be little pity for this unhappy man. He accuses himself of monstrosity, a thirst for blood, and a love of whisky, which is a confession which it is very plausibly said, is intended to convey the impression that his crimes were the result of insanity or uncontrollable impulses, induced by intoxicating drinks. A few weeks ago this heartless criminal had the insolence to write a treacherous letter, filled with Socratic and Platonic platitudes, and to profess his affection for children, and actually had the effrontery to lament over the death of Mabel Young. Now the contemptible scoundrel admits the guilt of the murder of Mabel Young, and attempts to escape the rope on the plea that he was used by an uncontrollable desire for blood, inspired by the influence of opium and rum.

The meeting was organized by D. C. Landers, Esq., J. P., being called to the chair, B. D. Macdonald, Esq., being appointed Secretary. L. Bloomfield Page, Esq., one of the promoters of the Railroad and proprietors of the Cleveland Iron Mines, at Niagara, described very lucidly the advantages which this road would be to the whole Province, but especially to this County; also giving access to the most extensive and valuable Iron Mines in the Dominion, if not in the world.

Rev. Dr. Robertson then addressed the meeting, and referred to his well-known interest in all matters which affected the temporal interests of the people, although his station was one more closely connected with spiritual matters. He was always favorable to enterprises which opened up the natural resources of the County, by railway, highways or byways, connected with lumbering, mining or manufacturing, and he was convinced that all these and many others would be materially benefited by the proposed road. The Cleveland Iron Mines, in the development of which Messrs. Page & Stearns were most directly interested, would alone give employment to thousands of men, and be the means of spreading throughout the County an immense sum of money which would almost all find its way to the pockets of the farmer in return for their produce. The Rev. Dr. also stated that there had been discovered large quartz reefs, similar to those in the Province eastward of Halifax, and it had been ascertained that gold could be mined there in paying quantities, if convenient access could be had to that part of the country. Dr. Robertson closed his very excellent address by reminding the meeting that progression and improvement was the motto of the age, and nothing was ever gained without a certain amount of enterprise, also stating that the expression of this meeting informal though it was, would materially influence the tone of the County on the subject.

G. E. Chesley, Esq., put several important questions to Mr. Page regarding the estimated cost of the road, the class of road to be built, &c., and receiving replies which were quite satisfactory to the meeting. B. H. Parker, Esq., J. P., made some very able and pertinent remarks on the necessity of such a means of communication with the South Shore, so called, and the advantages to be gained by all sections. He also questioned Mr. Page on the financial aspect of the subject, and commented on it in a manner that shows this gentleman is a master-financier, and thoroughly understands the value and influence of money in all such undertakings.

After some further and appropriate remarks from various gentlemen the following resolution was moved by Rev. Dr. Robertson and seconded by T. C. Wheelock, Esq., J. P.: Resolved—That this meeting expresses its sympathy with the object of the promoters of the Nova Scotia Nictaux and Atlantic Central Railway, and is satisfied that the country is anxious to have said Railroad built, and will be pleased to assist in all convenient ways. This resolution on being put to the meeting was unanimously adopted. It was further moved by T. C. Wheelock, Esq., seconded by A. Beckwith, Esq., J. P.:

That the Secretary be directed to have the proceedings of this meeting published in the Bridgetown "Monitor."

After a vote of thanks to the chairman, on the motion of Squire Wheelock, the meeting adjourned sine die.

THE PIPER MURDER. The confession of Piper, the murderer of Mabel Young—which the Herald announced yesterday in advance of the papers,—comes upon the public with startling effect. On the very eve of his confession a motion had been made for a new trial, and the public eye was attracted to a letter filled with protestations of his innocence. It was a letter rich in Scriptural reminiscence, abounding in pious quotations, and exhibiting a bold position on the ground that he had endeavored, in his cowardice, to escape the charge of murder by a falsehood. This feeble defence failed. Yet it is to be admitted that the circumstantial evidence against Piper was not sufficient to convince the public of his guilt. If he had been hanged without declaring his innocence the people might have supposed him to be the victim of a mistake. But, happily, any doubts of the kind are extinguished. The man has not only confessed that he murdered Mabel Young in the beffy, but that he was the assistant of Mary Tyler and also the murderer of Bridget Landreau.

There can be little pity for this unhappy man. He accuses himself of monstrosity, a thirst for blood, and a love of whisky, which is a confession which it is very plausibly said, is intended to convey the impression that his crimes were the result of insanity or uncontrollable impulses, induced by intoxicating drinks. A few weeks ago this heartless criminal had the insolence to write a treacherous letter, filled with Socratic and Platonic platitudes, and to profess his affection for children, and actually had the effrontery to lament over the death of Mabel Young. Now the contemptible scoundrel admits the guilt of the murder of Mabel Young, and attempts to escape the rope on the plea that he was used by an uncontrollable desire for blood, inspired by the influence of opium and rum.

The London Spectator calls Mr. A. T. Stewart "the Emperor of shopkeepers," and pronounces his reported estate of 216,000 sterling perhaps the largest in the world that ever was at one man's entire disposal, and certainly the largest that was ever made out of a shop or accumulated by trade in any kind of a man's lifetime. It is four times the fortune acquired by the late Mr. Morrison, five times that of Mr. Thornton, two and a half times the highest estimate ever formed of the wealth of Mr. Knox of Liverpool, and probably exceeds that of any business man now alive and without partners, except, perhaps, Commodore Vanderbilt, the American railway speculator, who is so called by rumor—which may, however, be exaggerated—with a larger accumulation still.

A frightful accident has occurred on the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway, at Paversham. William Taylorson, one of the engine-drivers, was standing in the goods' yard near a pair of points which communicate with the main line, talking to Mr. Keefe, the foreman of the locomotive department, and on the departure from the station of the 8.45 p. m. down train, he stepped into the four-foot way to shake his hand to the driver of the engine, which had come out of the dock to take on the Ramsgate portion of the train, knocking him down and ran over him, cutting him literally into pieces.

A newly-wedded bride, who was married to her husband at Toronto by Rev. J. M. Cameron, refused to live with him because she was married, according to the Presbyterian form, without a ring. There was a great disturbance among the friends who had attended the marriage. The young man to whom the bride had been engaged previously, appeared, and forbade the marriage, but the wedding was proceeded with. The bride still refuses to live with her husband, as she thinks the marriage is not legal, because she did not get a ring, as she says her mother and grandmother did.

AN INNOCENT MAN HANGED.

A few days ago the Times published a brief telegraphic despatch from Dodge City, Kan., announcing that a band of vigilantes had hanged two negroes at Fort Dodge, the stealing horses in Sumner county, Kansas. Subsequent inquiries, made by the grief-stricken father of one of the men hanged—a young man named Calahan, son of a preacher in Topeka—proved beyond a doubt that Calahan was guiltless of any connection with the crime. He was engaged in gathering buffalo bones on the plains, and had been hauling some from his "dig out" to the railroad when one of the horse thieves came to his place. He gave him shelter. While he was there the vigilantes from Sumner county came up and arrested both parties, and notwithstanding Calahan's protestations and his endeavor to show that he lived there and had not been to Sumner county, took him with the guilty man and hanged him then and there. The Rev. Mr. Calahan says his murdered son was in no way implicated in this crime.—Kansas City Times.

The approaching conference between Prince Gortschakoff, Count Andrássy and Prince Bismarck will be held at the latter's official residence. Some details of the conference have already received it appears that the United States Consul interfered for the protection of a Greek girl who was the innocent cause of the disturbance, and conducted her to the Consulate in his charge. An excited mob thereupon surrounded the Consulate, and the French and German Consuls, who were brothers-in-law and both related by marriage to the American Consul, believing from details of the riot proceeded to his assistance, and on the way thither were attacked. The Italian Consul informed the Governor of the state of affairs, and he sent troops to the relief of the American Consulate, which was besieged by the rabble.

An experienced woman, who was about to move, had much difficulty in finding a place to suit her. She was well pleased with a house uptown, but the back yard was not to her satisfaction. The fence didn't contain a single knot hole, and she said she wasn't going to break her neck by climbing on top of an old barrel to see what was going on in the next yard.—Norristown Herald.

The accommodation offered by hotels and boarding houses at Philadelphia is calculated to receive 98,000 guests, and private houses will increase it by another 20,000.

At the last annual banquet of the Old Guard, in Paris, recently there were only thirty-eight present. At the first banquet, twenty years ago, the soldiers numbered 600.
