We do not hold ourselves responsible for the views expressed in communications over the name, initials or other characters representing the contributor.

We prefer that remittances be made by post-office order or by registered letters. If bank drafts are sent from the United States they should be made payable at New York or Chicago. Postage stamps (American or Canadian) are accepted for change.

It is customary to postpone all tributes, especially those of a personal and eulogizing character until the subject has passed away. But a free and enlightened people, that professes not to be led by custom, but by the spirit of liberty, will not censure if we feel it right sometimes to eulogize the living. We are always loud in our disapprovals and exceedingly faint in our praises. Everywhere there is a dearth of human sympathy. Would it not be better to reverse this practice and approve wherever we can?

To speak words of thankfulness to one who already may have received the approval of the Father is not like "carrying coals to Newcastle." The approbation of kindred souls seem to be, by divine arrangement, a part of the "reward." Thus it becomes our duty to give it, and it is under a sense of this obligation that we write what follows.

The visit of our friend Darlington Hoopes amongst us has been a season of refreshment and rejoicing, and we thank our Heavenly Father for sending His servant this way, stirring up our minds by way of remembrance. His mode of thinking and putting things furnished us with new and, I might say, clearer conceptions of truth, although before familiar. Around one theme particularly centered the burden of his ministry, and we hope never to forget or lose sight of that. It sank deep in our soul and met the approval of the witness for truth there.

This one theme was in answer to the question: "How are we saved? By what power?" He believed it was by the Love of God in the soul. It is this that will end all hate, envy, wars and contentions, that will burn up all lusts and regulate all the passions and powers; it is this that is the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world; this that was the life blood of Jesus, the blood of the new covenant that he poured out abundantly on the cross with the prayer, "Father forgive them"; this it is that is to save the world. And I felt that the words were accompanied by the Spirit, for there was shedding forth of this self same love from the pulpit upon the multitude beneath, and I shall never forget its subtle influence over the heart nor the mission, I hope, of him whom I have come to think of as an apostle of Love.

The Prohibitory Amendment to the Constitution was defeated by a large majority (nearly 150,000) in the recent election in Pennsylvania.
