Vote and a hockey game breaks out!

Look for all the scoring opportunities lost by the NDP this week, when they rejected the highly credible and well-spoken Millie Augustine, to be gained by the more savvy Tories. The big blue machine plans to pick up free agent and hockey hero Everett Sanipass of Big Cove to be their candidate in Kent. Sleuth figures they've been skating on thin ice for so long in this province they've got good at the game. If the Liberals pick up Charlie Bourgeois in Moncton East, it could be a good old hockey game come the next election.

So Ivana Trump, the woman who spends more each month on the upkeep of her finely lacquered nails than most New Brunswick women budget for their yearly wardrobes, has been hired to launch a fall line of clothing to boost Zeller's image. From Club Med to Club Z, what a trip!

Speaking of the Petitcodiac River crossing. Sleuth's been spying around government circles this week and discovered the plan indeed is to run it from Outhouse

Point in Riverview to the Hall's Creek area of Dieppe.

Expect the announcement, but no actual work to start, just prior to the next provincial election, which incidentally is expected about a year from now.

The magnificent new hotel being planned by Bernard Cyr, Chateau Moncton, is going to be "The" place to be for style and pizzazz. Sleuth hears. By the way, building this mega-hotel isn't going to be cheap. The building permit for the foundation alone was for $4 million, with that old Petitcodiac clay soil not helping the process any. The structure is being put up at 170 Main St., where the old Cy's Restau-
